"Let each man exercise the art he knows best."

– ARISTOPHANES

Every musician, every singer, every dancer and actor, whether performing solo or ensemble, is to be individually thanked. Thanked for dreaming of moments when they can stand before you to entertain, enlighten, and amuse. Thanked for their time sacrificed to hone their skills. Thanked for seeking the arts as their form of expression.

We're all better for their efforts. James V. Zizzi understands labors of love, and his homes stand before you as testament. Which is why James V. Zizzi Contracting is a proud supporter of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center.

COUNTRY CLUB GOLF ON THE NORTH FORK

Laurel Links
Country Club

ONLY SEVERAL MEMBERSHIPS AVAILABLE!
DON'T MISS THIS SPECIAL OPPORTUNITY

The clubhouse is nearing completion and will be in full use this summer, with a wonderful grille room and dining facilities. The tennis courts are completed and will be ready for play in May, and the swimming pool is under construction and will be in use this summer. The pool house is just about finished and will be providing additional member services this spring. Our golf course has received its official MGA ratings and we are very proud of them. Our Course Rating of 74.9 and our slope Rating of 139 from the back are among the highest on Long Island and compare most favorably with the other great courses in the area.

• Laurel Links features a 7000 yard, 18-hole championship golf course designed by award-winning architect Kelly Blake Moran.

Broadway Matinee
Sat., Apr. 24th $155 pp.

Conceived by Andrew Lloyd Webber and Shekhar Kapur. This love story is set against the backdrop of the colorful and magical Indian movie industry. "Bollywood" in Bombay, a city where romantic fantasy and harsh reality live side by side. Bombay Dreams is a celebration of the best of humanity. Package includes orchestra seats at the Broadway Theatre, lunch at Giambelli's 50th Restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation.

The New York Botanical Garden

Sun., May 16th
$70 pp.

Enjoy a guided 1-hour tour of the gardens including the new visitor's center opening this spring. Tour the shimmering 19th century crystal palace which opened in May, 1977 after a $24 million restoration. Discover the upland and lowland rain forests, an aquatic plant house and the deserts of the New and Old World. Package includes admissions, guided tour of the gardens, hot-plate lunch at the Garden Café in the Botanical Gardens and round-trip transportation.

New York Yankees vs. Kansas City Royals

Sat., May 1st
Cap Day (ALL FANS)
$55 pp.

Game Time: 1:05 p.m.
Package Includes:
Round-trip transportation and Loge box game ticket.

"Sly Fox" Broadway Matinee
Wed., May. 26th $155 pp.

"Gold is God with an 'L,'" is the motto of Foxwell J. Sly, a miserly con man in Gold Rush-era San Francisco. Greed is good (or at least funny) in Larry Gelbart's classic comedy, starring Richard Dreyfuss and directed by Arthur Penn. Cast includes Bob Dishy, Bronson Pinchot, Eric Stoltz, Rachel York, Elizabeth Berkley and others. Package includes orchestra seats at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, lunch at Rosie O'Grady's and deluxe round-trip transportation.

Broadway Matinee
Sat., May 8th $155 pp.

This revival of Lorraine Hansberry's groundbreaking drama is about an African-American family in segregated Chicago trying to buy a house in a predominantly white neighborhood. Starring Sean Combs (P. Diddy), Audra McDonald, Phylicia Rashad and Sannaa Lathan. Package includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at Rosie O'Grady's and round-trip transportation.

4-Day Tour — World War II Memorial Dedication in Washington, DC

Fri., May 28th-
Mon., May 31st
$699 pp., dbl. occ.

"This could be one of the last great gatherings of World War II veterans in this country". For veterans and their families, this will be one of the most memorable trips you ever take. Package includes dedication, evening (with section 1 reserved seating), illumination tour of the monuments and more, 3-nights hotel accommodations, taxes, gratuities and baggage handling; 3 breakfast buffets, luncheon, 2 dinners and a dinner cruise. Call for complete itinerary.

Alfred Molina in Fiddler on the Roof

Broadway Matinee
Wed., May 12th $165 pp.

Alfred Molina stars as Tevye the Milkman in the classical musical about the traditions that bind a family whose daughters are yearning for something new even as great changes are happening in the world outside their village of Anatevka. This international sensation was inspired by the stories of Sholom Aleichem and was first presented in 1964 introducing the memorable songs, "If I Were a Rich Man," "Matchmaker, Matchmaker," and others. Package includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at the U.N. Delegates Dining Room and round-trip transportation.

3-Day Tour
The Middlebury Inn
"Who Done It?"
Mystery 'Inn-Trigue'

Sat., May 15th-
Mon., May 17th
$320 pp., dbl. occ.

Try this combination of touring and live participation theater, for a fun-filled weekend. Package includes 2-nights hotel accommodations, 2 breakfasts, 2 dinners, 2 evenings of entertainment (one is unfolding the mystery), lunch, a welcome reception, a wine & cheese party, room & meal taxes, baggage handling, gratuities on meals, all admissions, and a souvenir group photo. Call for complete itinerary.

The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Spring Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

1(888) 414 - DOWN

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

HMS Culloden, 1768

Man-O-War

Go See The Wreck Of HMS Culloden, A Casualty Of The Revolutionary War

By Dan Rattiner

If you haven't been out to Montauk in a while, you're in for a treat. Huge sections of the peninsula have been saved by the town, the county, the state and the federal government, and all sorts of parks and other recreational facilities have been designated where before there had been open land that might have been developed into housing tracts. Montauk has become a sportsman's paradise, with facilities for scuba diving (at Culloden), seal watching (at Camp Hero), hiking over miles of trails (at East Lake among other places), camping (at Hither Hills among other places), surfing (at Ditch Plains among other places), windsurfing (in Napeague Harbor) and horseback riding (at Deep Hollow Ranch). Of course, the more traditional sportfishing, golf, tennis,surf-casting and swimming are available just about everywhere.

Seen in perspective, the change in recent years has been dramatic, and at this point more than fifty percent of this wonderful, rolling, open land has been saved to be enjoyed by all. I cannot think of one other part of the East End that has undergone the transformation that Montauk has. On the other hand, I cannot think of one other part of the East End that is more rugged and stunningly beautiful than this 15,000 acre peninsula that extends out toward Europe about fifteen miles.

What the French did not know was that their fleet was less than half the size of the British fleet here.

The latest addition to Montauk's string of improvements involves a strip of land, owned by the Town, that is up behind the fishing village, facing out into Block Island Sound. This is the access point for scuba divers who wish to visit the underwater shipwreck of the British Man-O-War Culloden, the remains of which litter the sandy bottom of the Sound 150 feet off what is now known as Culloden Point. The shipwreck is a historic site, it is the only underwater site that is under the protection of the State of New York (artifacts cannot be removed), and it is the only site in New York State that has a shipwreck under ownership by Her Majesty's government in England which therefore entitles it to sovereign immunity. It is also protected by the National Register of Historic Places.

Until now, scuba divers had to park far away from the access point, carry their gear over a road, and then make their way out onto a bluff to scramble down the rocks near this spectacular wreck. The improvements, announced last week, are a stairway down the rocks, a viewing point from

Playing With Time

The Hamptons Should Simply Stay On Daylight Saving Time Forever

By Dan Rattiner

Sometimes we just do stupid things because everybody else does them. On the afternoon of April 4, for example, we added an hour to the time on our wristwatches, reset the clock in the car, and in the evening at home, strolled around the house resetting all the clocks on the walls. The last thing we did was go into the kitchen to stare at the clock on the stove, which we have never figured out, and which now we could see, much to our satisfaction, had the right time again. This is going on all over the country.

The result of this, of course, is that we are now back on Daylight SAVING Time. It saves nothing, of course. On April 5, the amount of daylight was just about the same as it was on April 4. It's just that the sun rises at seven in the morning and sets at seven in the evening instead of six and six. It seems stupid, but we all do it. Here's the story.

The government had been experimenting with this business in various places during the first half of the twentieth century. But it was, finally, during the years of the Second World War, that President Roosevelt said that we could conserve electricity if we moved from six and six to seven and seven. Early in the morning, getting out of bed in our groggy states, we really don't care if it is dark or not. But in the evening, we'd be turning lights on all over the house after six and it would be a big help for the war effort if we made the change to seven to delay doing that, thereby saving the cost of the electricity. It actually should be called Electricity Saving Time.

In any case, the war ended just as all this was going into effect, and after that, the state of Arizona opted out of the program. Nobody objected. Then Hawaii, when it became a state in 1959, opted out. And in 1970, 77 of the 93 counties in Indiana opted out of Daylight Saving Time. Drive along the border between Indiana and Kentucky, on the Indiana side the whole length, and you will turn your watch back or forward four times.

> ...dinner would forever be graced by the reds, yellows, oranges and purples of sunset and the afterglow.

Bet you didn't know that, did you? Indeed, now that you do, it kind of puts a different slant on things, doesn't it? You don't have to follow along because everybody else does it. Not everybody else does it. Make up your own mind.

My own mind says that as far as the eastern end of Long Island is concerned, we ought to stay on Daylight Saving Time year around. We live in a world of sunsets out here. Water is everywhere, and we get sunsets over harbors and bays, over lakes and inlets, over Long Island Sound and even, for several months of the year, over the Atlantic Ocean.

The months the sun sets over the ocean, for example, are December, January and February. But on Eastern Standard Time, which is then in effect, this happens beginning at three thirty in the afternoon. The work of the world is still going on at three thirty in the afternoon and it is hard to get away. But at four thirty, which is what it would be on Daylight Saving Time, it's another story. Leave half an hour early now and then, nobody will mind. Sunsets and the afterglow are a fabulous experience.

The other main point about staying on Daylight Saving Time is how it would contrast with the rest of the East Coast as it moves back and forth between Daylight and Eastern Time. For seven months of the year, as people coming out from the city approach the outskirts of Westhampton Beach and Riverhead, they would pull over and set their watches one hour later. This act would mark the beginning of a new experience, the experience of the East End with sunsets that bring light into the dinner hour. Except for the heart of the winter (when the sun sets over the ocean), dinner would forever be graced by the reds, yellows, oranges and purples of sunset and the afterglow. You don't get that in New York City.

Finally, there is a mechanism for making this happen. For ten years now, the five eastern towns of Long Island — Southampton, Riverhead, East Hampton, Southold and Shelter Island — have been unanimous in their efforts to create a new and separate county for this place. Suburbia has spilled out Long Island as far as Brookhaven Township. Beyond that are the rural fields of the East End. We should be our own county.

Indiana: The shaded counties do not observe the time changes as we do.

At the next meeting of the Supervisors of the Five Eastern Towns as they plot and scheme about the politics of creating a Peconic County, the matter of permanent Daylight Saving Time can be brought up. First, we opt out of Eastern Standard Time; then, we create our own currency. We already have a Peconic County flag, designed as the result of a competition five years ago.

Sometimes the times just demand action. Five centuries ago, Pope Gregory, noting that because the old calendar hadn't accounted for leap year in more than a thousand years, realized there was a big crisis about the date. The Pope simply ordered time to fast forward nine days. If you look in the history books, you will find that NOTHING HAPPENED during the period between October 4 and October 15, 1582. There just WAS no October 4-15. Now we are all caught up except for this little stupid glitch twice a year. I say, thank you, Pope Gregory for paving the way. • the shore for disabled people, and a small parking area for those who want to see this underwater treasure and need to park up close. The work is currently underway and should be completed before Memorial Day.

The Culloden was a 170 foot long wooden man-o-war built in 1741. It was named the Culloden after the Battle of Culloden in the year before, when the Duke of Cumberland's army defeated the Young Pretender. The Culloden carried a crew of 600 and had a total of 74 cannonball firing guns, 37 on a side. It served around the world, in the far flung reaches of the British Empire, and it was involved in gun battles against the French off Minorca in the Mediterranean in 1756, and again against the French off Gibraltar in 1759. The British Navy was the largest in the world. And the HMS Culloden was a proud part of it.

After July 4, 1776, when the American colonies signed their Declaration of Independence, HMS Culloden was sent to America as part of the large naval force under the command of Vice Admiral Arbuthnot that brought British Redcoats to the other side of the Atlantic to fight against the rebels. She became part of the fleet guarding the City of New York. By 1780, the British had defeated the ragtag colonial army put together by General George Washington on Long Island, and sent the Americans fleeing across New Jersey to spend a hard winter recuperating in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. After that, the Culloden, along with her sister ship the Royal Oak and dozens of others, remained in New York City to guard that port from any outside interference.

At first, things had gone well for the British, but soon thereafter, the British began to get bogged down here. In 1779, the French declared their allegiance with the rebels, and in the autumn of 1780, they sent a considerable fleet across the ocean with orders to organize a blockade against the British. English schooners bringing freight to the troops in the northeast would be prevented from making landfall.

The French arrived in late December, 1780, and came into a port under rebel control at Newport, Rhode Island. There they would provision and rest up before taking out to sea again. What the French did not know was that their fleet was less than half the size of the British fleet here. And so, after some British spies informed Admiral Arbuthnot of that fact, he ordered practically the entire British fleet out into Long Island Sound off Montauk to blockade the French ships, essentially turning the tables. One of the ships that went out was the Royal Oak. Another was the Culloden. A

Lightening My Bag

Interesting Stories From All Over Including Long Island's East End

By Dan Rattiner

In an effort to keep up with what's going on here on the East End, or in the country or the world, I try to read everything I can lay my hands on. When I find something that sparks my interest, I put the item in the shoulder bag I carry around. Maybe I will write something someday. Well, maybe I do. But maybe I don't. Lately, the bag is getting heavy. So, to lighten it, here is a summary of some of the things I've been carrying around.

In Iowa, a laboratory for the study of animal diseases is located in a shopping mall, and people are now getting fidgety about it. "It doesn't seem to have the proper safeguards to protect the general public," a local official said, noting that he favored moving it somewhere else or closing it. The government says this is one of the largest labs of its kind in the country, and it should not be closed down.

Three weeks ago, on board a Jet Blue flight from LaGuardia Airport to Florida, two men sitting together began to argue. The argument got louder and louder, and then erupted into a full scale fist fight. Flight attendants calmed the men down, but in moments, the fighting broke out again. And so the pilot made the decision to make an emergency landing at the airport in Wilmington, North Carolina, where, to the cheers of the passengers, the two men were escorted off the plane into the arms of waiting FBI men.

In the interrogation, it turned out the two men were twin brothers and argued all the time. They knew nothing about international terrorism. The FBI released the men and they were last seen at a car rental counter, arguing again while trying to decide on a vehicle they could drive to complete their trip to Florida.

In San Paolo, Brazil, a man walked out to the parking lot in front of a shopping mall to find an empty space where his car had been. His car was stolen. Not an unusual occurrence in San Paolo.

WE WON AND OUR HEROS SHOULD COME HOME

By Dan Rattiner

It has been widely reported that George W. Bush does not read newspapers or magazines. He has many learned advisors who do that, among them Condeleezza Rice, Colin Powell and John Ashcroft. They become aware of public opinion and they tell him what is going on. Then, George Bush, sitting in his chair at the White House, or out back at a barbecue in Texas, makes his decisions. That's what we pay him for.

On a very simple level, he has done a very good thing in Iraq. There was a terrible dictator there who murdered everybody that opposed him. That dictator is now gone, and good riddance. The Iraqi people are now free to decide on what sort of government they want in the future.

This accomplishment, which took six weeks and cost the lives of 500 young American men and women, should have been the end of it. We should have said goodbye to the Iraqi people, wished them well, and they would have cheered us to the airplanes and boats and said "Thank You." And we would have said, "You're Welcome."

I recall, before the war, George W. Bush saying "Hang on, Iraqi people. We are coming." Indeed, our troops were greeted by cheering throngs. Soon, the dictator was gone. Being that this is Iraq, an Arab nation of 20 million people, and considering that no democracy has ever successfully taken a foothold in the Arab world, after we left there might have been a bit of infighting among the various groups in that shattered country as a new pecking order established itself — probably a dictatorship or leadership with a more respectful attitude toward its citizens. Life would have gone on. We would have showered them with money. They would have rebuilt. Hopefully, they would have remembered us for what we did in delivering them from a megalomaniac with statues in every square, a secret police, political prisons and death squads.

Could Hussein have come back? Iraqis, like most people in most places around the world, like peace in their lives, and would have had a pit bull they could call upon to move in again, with a new laserlike attack in this situation. Us. No, I think the Iraqis would have, out of the chaos, formed a new way to govern themselves that might resemble Syria, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia or Egypt, all governments with dictators, but reasonably benevolent ones.

So what was the idea of staying? What we were told was that we still had to find the bombs and chemicals. We'd yelled that at the UN. Apparently, we did not trust them to do the looking any more. Bush said, incongruously, I thought, that we had won Iraq and for the

But the man was distraught. Then he realized he had also left his cell phone on the front seat of the car, and he called it. The car thief answered. In heartwrenching terms, the victim told the car thief that he was just about broke, that he couldn't afford another car and without one, he would lose his job. The thief thanked him for calling and said he understood, and that the man would find his car in a parking lot across town. He also said he was sorry to cause him such troubles.

The car was found in good condition exactly where the thief said he would leave it. And the cell phone was with it.

In Australia, at a chain of jeans stores, the female clerks were given t-shirts to wear that management said they thought would help sales. The t-shirts had a slogan on the front, which read STOP PRETENDING YOU DON'T WANT ME. Somebody had thought this was a good marketing idea.

After three weeks, however, the owners of the chain of stores, Westco, asked the women to turn either turn in the shirts or keep them but not wear them to work. Several clerks had said they had been sexually harassed.

An assistant store manager named Sarah Freeman was one. "One guy just looked at my breasts and said, 'Hello!'" she said.

Two students at the Royal College of Art have designed a telephone that can be implanted in a tooth. They are James Auger and Jimmy Loiseau, and they say that it can be implanted by a dentist using the same tools he uses to fill a cavity. You know how, at the beginning of a play or concert, the request comes over the loudspeaker to turn off your cellphone? I guess you just have to keep your mouth shut.

Neighbors in Southold have sued James and Barbara Miller for putting a twenty foot high, translucent sculpture of a heron on their back lawn. The heron is raising himself up toward the sky, stretching his neck in a kind of prayerful stance. Or else he is just doing his stretches. The property in question is on Peconic Bay, where the Millers apparently like looking at this thing, but the neighbors don't. When they look out, blocking their water view is this giant heron. They filed a lawsuit.

A court ruled in favor of the Millers, saying it was art, and therefore, to remove it would be interfering with their freedom of artistic expression. So, the neighbors filed a different suit, claiming the heron was a "structure" needing a town building permit.

So the Millers applied for one. After getting it, the neighbors sued again, this time against the Zoning Board of Appeals, saying they didn't have the right to issue a building permit because it wasn't a building. After the neighbors lost that one, they appealed but lost the appeal. This was on May 9, 2003. I've been carrying the decision around for a long time now.

These neighbors really don't like this heron.

Last summer, NBC ran a six-episode reality show called "The Restaurant," about the real life attempt of chef Rocco DiSpirito to found a first class eatery in Manhattan. The cameras followed him in his pursuit of backers, kitchen equipment, staff members and even the opening night party. The restaurant is in business today, and it is called Rocco's, located on East 22nd Street. On TV, it was called Rocco's 22nd Street, so as not to confuse it with anything else.

Trouble is, while Rocco has made out quite well from his celebrity on TV, the restaurant, according to his backers, is a flop. The backers have sued him. And they want their investment back. They have also changed the locks and are barring DiSpirito from the premises.

"The quality of the food and service has been widely criticized," the backers wrote in a law suit they have filed. "DiSpirito has spent insufficient time on the food and service at the restaurant and has not devoted the time and effort needed to operate the restaurant in a financially responsible manner."

"I unfortunately chose the wrong business partners," said DiSpirito when asked about it by the New York Times. Monday, April 4, he filed a countersuit for $6 million in damages. Among his charges were that his partners did not pay his help or suppliers on time. And that they forced him to substitute commercial spaghetti for the freshly made stuff he had

A Historic Community Moves Toward Forming An Incorporated Village

by Ana Daniel

On May 6th, the Supervisor of Southampton Town will hold a public hearing on the incorporation of Sagaponack. In anticipation of this important meeting I would like to express – as one who has been working toward this objective – why we wish to form a legal village.

Sagaponack has been a defined place for more than two and a half centuries. It was a fishing and farming area even before Englishmen came here to take up these traditions. The continuum of sea and fields is and has been for all of human memory the essence of Sagaponack.

Last summer, there was a very active attempt to form a village to be called Dunehampton, which would have separated Sagaponack from its beaches. This threat to the integrity of the historical hamlet united our community and joined local families like the Fosters, the Tillotsons and the McCoys with newer residents like me (I have only lived here for twenty-three years) to petition the Town for the right to incorporate. Together, we invested many volunteer hours in preparing the necessary documentation.

To become an incorporated village under New York State law, an area not exceeding five square miles or coinciding with a school district must have five hundred regular inhabitants. The legal definition of a regular inhabitant was recently reaffirmed by Justice John

The borders of two proposed new villages in the Hamptons

J.J Jones of the Suffolk County New York State Supreme Court [index # 03-23873] as "a person who resides in the territory where they vote." This definition includes the minor children of such persons. Justice Jones went on to say that: "While reside does not mean domicile, neither does it include a holiday or weekend visitor". Further, the petition for incorporation must be signed by twenty percent of those registered to vote in the territory.

The arduous effort to prepare our petition for the incorporation of Sagaponack only served to enhance our sense of community and to heighten our awareness of what would be lost if our petition were to fail: community, tradition, a sense of place that is defined by more than the literal boundaries of one's personal property. As our neighbor Roy Scheider wrote in these pages several weeks ago, "Sagaponack is a real place, with a look, a tradition, and an attitude."

The hamlet of Sagaponack is defined by the school district that corresponds to the little red schoolhouse on the corner of Sagaponack Road and Sagg Main. It extends from the center of Sagg Pond to the west and Town Line Road to the east. The north-south axis runs from the railroad tracks to the ocean. Its beaches are Sagg Main, Gibson and Peter's Pond.

Sagaponack is also one of the last communities on the East End which retains the original bucolic character that once extended from Shinnecock to Montauk. We have the good fortune to have in our number families who continue to farm large tracts of the South Fork's

Years ago, you never saw any seals in the Atlantic Ocean near the Long Island shoreline. Now you do. No one knows why there has been such an increase. Maybe it has to do with global warming.

In any case, when the seals first began to appear, some of them washed ashore, either dazed or sick. Bathers on the beach didn't know what to do, so they called the police. The police quickly learned, after consulting with vets, that bathers should stay away from seals because seals bite, particularly when they aren't feeling good. Soon after that, vets began coming down to the shore to see what they could do.

Today, there is the Riverhead Foundation for Marine Research and Preservation, a non profit foundation based in Riverhead that has a laboratory and recuperating tanks to hold as many as 44 seals at one time. Their big annual gala was held at the Riverhead Aquarium recently. Much money was raised.

But the seals keep coming. In the past two years, 247 seals were rescued, rehabilitated and returned to the wild. And this year so far, the numbers are running above last year. The seals eat 12 to 16 pounds of fish a day, cost about $30 a day to rehabilitate which takes about six to eight weeks. If you see a seal, call The Foundation immediately at 631-369-9829. And cute as they are, don't try to pet one.

A thought occurred to me — what if we get inundated with herds of them wandering the beaches? They are not an endangered species. Do we expand the rescue service and have a multi-story hospital? Or do we let nature take its course. We'll cross that bridge when we come to it, I guess.

A woman went through security at LaGuardia Airport last Saturday, and was on her way to Denver aboard a Spirit Airlines flight when, in mid-air, she suddenly remembered that in her pocketbook was a knife and a stun gun which security had apparently overlooked. Panicked, she called a flight attendant and turned herself in. The pilot set the plane down in Detroit, police surrounded it, took the woman off the plane, talked to her, and then decided not to take her into custody.

"She did the right thing," a flight attendant said later.

She had quite a story to tell whoever met her in Denver, that's for sure. And she delayed the plane. But that's another story.

On December 9, a woman called in to the Curtis Sliwa morning talk show on WABC 770. She wanted to make some comments about the topic of the day, which happened to be Michael Jackson.

After a few questions to Ron Kuby, who was also on the show, suddenly, there was a crash.

"Cheryl, are you OK? Cheryl? Cheryl?" Kuby shouted.

Cheryl Picker, age 44, was not okay. The SUV she was driving had just been plowed into by a Toyota Camry. She on the William Floyd Parkway in Melville, Long Island and was taken to Stony Brook Hospital where she was listed the next day in stable condition. Probably wondering if she had made her point on the air before she got hit, but can't remember.

You know about this one. I don't believe it, either. According to the Associated Press, a 23 year old man in Hartland, Maine nailed two pieces of wood into a big cross, then tried to nail himself to it, crucifixion fashion. To do this, he put several three inch nails in his teeth, picked up a hammer, then transferred the nail to the palm of his about to be pierced hand with his free hand and hammered it through into the wood.

After that, he wanted to nail his other hand to the cross, but with only one arm remaining, was unable to figure out how to do it. Eventually, he gave up, dragged the cross over to a telephone and dialed 911.

"There is no crime here," Somerset County Sheriff Barry DeLong told reporters. "We are treating this as a failed suicide attempt."

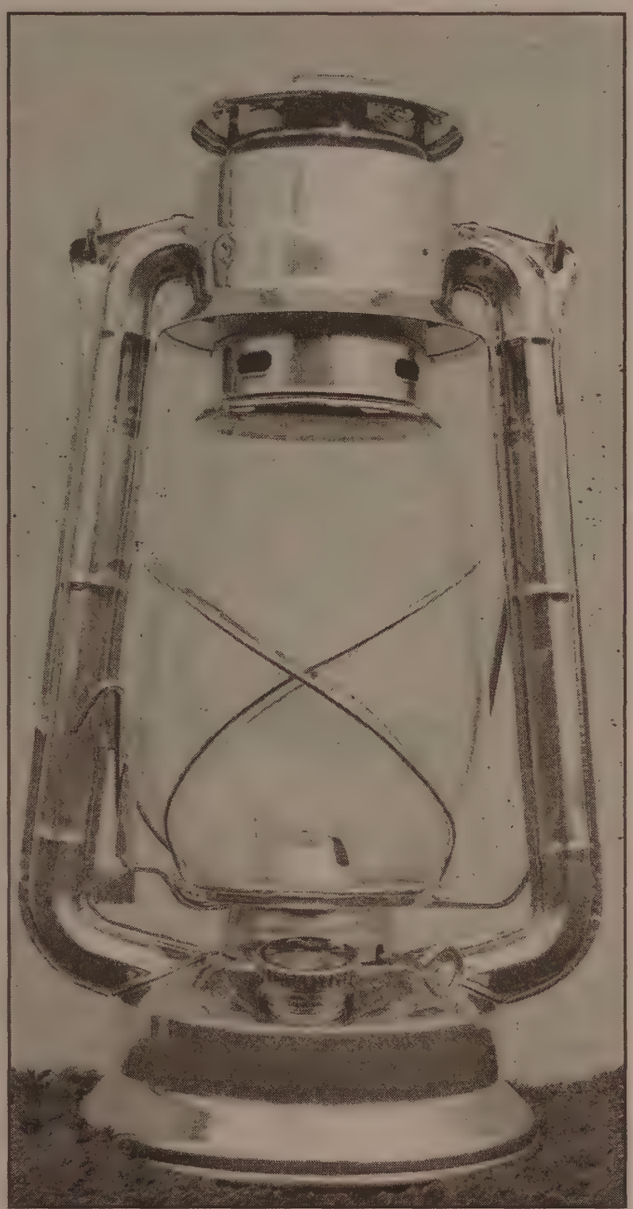
Lantern Walk

Through The Darkness Up And Down The Streets Of East Hampton

By Emily J. Weitz



It was the last place I expected to find myself as Saturday afternoon gave way to evening. I was soaking in the cedar-scented warmth of the front room of the Clinton Academy on Main Street in East Hampton, surrounded by wooden wheels and rusty, time-worn tools. I sat in a circle, in the company of a few clever kids and some smiling adults, surrounding a man in round spectacles and a flowing cape. The man's name was Hugh, and he was to lead us by the light of a lantern through the history of East Hampton. In his hand he clutched a long black cane, and his voice held the tone of irony and humor as he shared with us the history of East Hampton's colonial times. He was respectful of the plight of the native people without diminishing the quaintness and beauty of East Hampton's European birth and youth.

East Hampton is one of the oldest towns in the country, and many of the buildings have been beautifully preserved. I have strolled through this town so many times with a quiet curiosity about the faded cemetery stones and the peeling paint, but I never realized how accessible our history is, and how much work some members of our community put in to preserving it. The East Hampton Historical Society cares for a system of six significant historical sites: Clinton Academy, built in 1784, the Town House, built in 1731, The Osborn-Jackson House, dated to 1740, Mulford Farm, built in 1680, the Town Marine Museum, and the Boat Shop. The lantern tour was a romantic stroll past some of these sites, with a bonus visit to a beautiful private home.

The first building of the tour was the Clinton Academy, where we met over cheese and crackers. The Clinton Academy was named for George Clinton. No, not the funk legend, although I was pretty excited about that prospect at first. This George Clinton donated the Academy's bell, and in 1787, the Clinton Academy was chartered as a school that actually allowed young women and men to attend together. It was a private academy that accepted students from all over the country, provided, of course, that their parents could afford it. By the mid-1850s, every town had its own public school, so The Clinton Academy School was closed. But that was certainly not the end of its life. The Clinton Academy has also played the role of library, community hall, and now is part of the Historical Society. After this brief educational introduction, Hugh led us up the wide stairs to the second floor, a reddish room where classes used to be conducted. The original desks still sit, heavy with the weight of idle years. Resting on one of the desks was a student's doodle of what was once the view across the street. A beautiful church stands in the middle of a worn page as a reminder of the steeple that once stood where Guild Hall's parking lot now lies. The Town Church was functioning between 1717 and 1861, and was torn down in 1870.

A car zoomed down the street... beeping its horn in Saturday night excitement, clashing with the calm of the amber glow of our lanterns

Before leaving the stillness of the room, we each lifted our glowing lanterns, causing shadows to dance on rich wooden walls. I peered around corners to see dark stairways leading to long unopened doors, unlit candles poised awaiting flame in front of long unplayed sheet music.

We stepped out into the coolness of the late evening of early spring and strolled down the street, following Hugh's flowing black cape that swept the ground. We spent a few minutes seated in the East Hampton Town House, once a one-room school house. I lifted the feather plume from the ink well before me and grandiosely scripted my name. A car zoomed down the street out the window, beeping its horn in Saturday night excitement, clashing with the calm of the amber glow of our lanterns cast across blackboard notepads. The Town House was also host to the meetings of the town trustees, who make up the oldest governing body in East Hampton.

We filed out of the cramped schoolhouse to continue our glowing processional, and stopped in front of beautiful buildings like the 1770 House, the East Hampton Star, the Library, and Guild Hall to hear stories of their winding histories. From Guild Hall, we headed up Main Street like a line of fireflies. You could almost smell the history in the spice of the air as we strolled past the peeling paint of historical homes. Hugh suggested that one of the children knock on the door of a particularly beautiful home, and ask if perhaps we could see the inside. Three children knocked on the green painted door, and we lined our lanterns up on the street as we were welcomed into the home to be warmed by a crackling fire.

The Lear House was built in 1774, and only the third owners currently reside there. The house is endowed with four huge fireplaces, and the walls are made of wide wooden planks from massive trees. The house was so perfectly restored that I could barely comprehend the presence of a TV resting on the wide floorboards.

After bidding good night to the Lears, we lifted our lanterns from the sidewalk and continued the journey through the past. We paused at the Palm and East Hampton Village Hall, once the home of Lyman Beecher and his prestigious children, including his daughter Harriet Beecher Stowe.

The last stop on our tour was the Osborn Jackson House, the original part of which is supposed to have been built in 1723. This review: ross gload

By Dan Rattiner

In front of 37,000 fans at Yankee Stadium on Sunday evening, young Ross Gload of East Hampton strode up to the plate to face the best pitcher in baseball, Mariano Rivera. It was the ninth inning, the last chance for the Chicago White Sox, and they were behind the Yankees one run with few prospects.

Gload was the star of the AAA International League last year. He led the league in extra base hits, was second in hits and slugging percentage, and his .315 batting average had ranked him fourth in this, the top tier in the minors. Now for the 2004 season, he's been named to the White Sox roster, to play as a pinch hitter and fill in in the outfield. Just outside the batter's box, he tapped the dirt off his spikes with his bat, took a deep breath, and stepped in.

Rivera was in absolutely top form. The Yankee closer, he had been brought in for the ninth inning, just as he had been brought in for the ninth inning in the three previous games of this four game stand between the Yanks and the Sox. Joe Creedy, the first batter to lead off the ninth for the White Sox, took a strike, a second strike, and then just stood there, as a curve ball came right at him, inside. It had not been thrown hard. It hit him, and he took first base.

The next batter was Timo Perez, the White Sox leading pinch hitter, who had come in to pinch hit for Rowand. Perez was batting .400. He took a strike, another strike, then looked at a ball outside, and then decided too late to swing at a blazing fast ball from Rivera, just standing there with his bat on his shoulder as the ball blazed by for strike three.

And so it was Gload's turn. A graduate of the Springs School and East Hampton High School, he was voted player of the year in his senior year and made the all-county baseball squad. He went to Florida representing East Hampton that year. Then he was off to college, The University of South Florida. By 1998, he was ready to try out for a major league team. He didn't make it. He would have to cut his teeth in the minors.

Now he was facing the legendary Mariano Rivera in just the eighth game of the 2004 season. He tapped the plate, took another deep breath and waggled his bat to show he was ready. Rivera threw a 100 mph fastball, and as Rivera threw, Gload took aim at it and with a crack, lashed it out into right field between Giambi and Wilson for a solid single. Creedy held up at second, but there was Ross Gload, on first, representing the go-ahead run for the White Sox.

But then it just fizzled. The next batter, lead off hitter Willie Harris, met the same fate as Timo Perez. Two fastballs for two strikes, a wasted pitch, and then strike three, which Harris swung at, but missed by a foot. Now there were two outs, and up came Jose Valentin, who had a home run, a triple, a walk, and a reach on an error that day. He swallowed hard, too, as he stepped in to face Rivera. And down he went. Strike one, strike two and then a little dribbler to second, a toss from Wilson to Jeter to catch Gload, and it was all over.

Final score, Yankees 5, Chicago 4. And somewhere in there, a rally, led by Gload with his first major league hit for the Chicago White Sox, going for naught.

Here in East Hampton, for his fans and friends, it was a start.

Jimmy Buffett
Songwriter & Beach Bum

By Jerry Cimisi

Perhaps it was being born on Christmas Day that inclined Jimmy Buffet to make life a fantasy — or, rather to make what most people would think of as a fantasy life into a very real one. For three decades he's had a lot of fun and made a lot of money, being a beach bum of sorts and singing about it. "Margaritaville" and "Parrothead" have entered the popular culture. Recently, on one of his famous "Top Ten" lists, David Letterman said that one of the reasons you know you're getting special treatment in prison is "When other prisoners refer to your cell as Margaritaville."

Arriving on this earth that Christmas Day in 1946, in Pascagoula, Mississippi, Buffett grew up in Mobile, Alabama. It was a time when Americans were concerned about the atom bomb (soon to be joined by the H-bomb) and the Cold War. In the South of Buffett's childhood, segregation would soon be furiously challenged. Perhaps it was this portentous atmosphere that made the young Mr. Buffett major in journalism at Auburn University and the University of Southern Mississippi. Soon, however, he turned toward a profession that was more natural to his heart: he became the Nashville correspondent for Billboard magazine. And soon after that he was playing in a band called the Now Generation.

In 1970 he signed with a record company, but this first break led nowhere. It was a divorce and a subsequent move from Nashville to Key West that began to transform Buffett into someone who would write and sing about the joy of a certain climate, beaches, and escape from the humdrum of normal life.

"It takes no more time to see the good side of life than the bad," he would write years later, in Tales from Margaritaville.

In 1973 (playfully changing one word in an old song title from the 50s), Buffett turned out his first successful album: A White Sport Coat and a Pink Crustacean. One of its songs, "The Great Filling Station Holdup," became a big country hit. Buffett had begun to ride a wave of his own creation.

He really hit the beach with a big album in 77, Changes in Latitudes, Changes in Attitudes, which included "Margaritaville." Equally hedonistic was the "Why Don't We get Drunk (And Screw)." He followed that up the next year with Son of a Son of a Sailor, one of whose big hits was "Cheeseburger in Paradise."

The albums would keep coming, some with more humorous word play: Last Mango in Paris; Off to See the Lizard.

"If we can't laugh, we would all go insane." Jimmy Buffett.

Some of his song titles were equally wry: "If the Phone Doesn't Ring, It's Me."

Buffet had established himself as a big concert draw. His audiences would wear Hawaiian shirts and call themselves Parrotheads. There would be a beachwear line. And in the 90s, a website — Margaritaville.com, of course.

In Key West, Palm Beach and Sag Harbor, Buffett lived the life he sang about. A Key West writer linked the island's other famous resident, Ernest Hemingway, with Buffet, saying that both had a lot of money in the Keys when other people did not have any.

Buffett did not exactly come to the Keys as a rich man. In an essay he wrote for Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Magazine, Buffett talked about going regularly to a bar there frequented by Martin Kane, a retired writer for SI. Buffet envied Kane's success.

Buffett enjoyed the assignment for Sports Illustrated, describing it as "wonderful as playing for Bear Byrant or dating an LSU cheerleader." Buffett had been a big football fan. But he admitted that when it came to fashion, this was "something I knew nothing about, because I have been fortunate enough to have lived on or near a beach for most of my life."

Then came the realization this lifestyle did give him some knowledge about bathing suits, as he was wearing one when he wrote the essay in the British Virgin Islands in January.

Not that Buffett wrote about bathing suits at all, but instead, fishing for tarpon in the Caribbean, and meeting once, in Cuba, Gregorio Fuentes, the captain of Hemingway's fishing boat, Pilar. It had been speculated that moment it was ours and we would occupy it until we had reformed the place and put in Iraqi security people who could enforce Freedom and Democracy for the now free people of that country. It had nothing to do with oil, with Halliburton, or with money — although those countries who had not come in with us would be cut out of the contract bidding process.

You will recall that we occupied Japan after we beat it. Of course, Japan had attacked us and we demanded nothing less than unconditional surrender from their government. As for Iraq, they had not attacked us, but they were thinking about it (or so we thought), so a preemptive strike was legitimate (or so we thought). Now we were staying to help them create a new democracy.

Somebody must have shown George W. Bush a breakdown of the factions that make up Iraq. The country consists of 55% Shiite Muslims, 40% Sunni Muslims and 5% Kurds. Hussein and his henchmen were Sunnis. Obviously, the country should be ruled by Shiites. Anybody could see that. So that's why Hussein had been so brutal. He scared the majority to death and set their knees trembling. Well, we can fix that.

You know, if Bush had only done a little reading himself, he would have had a better insight to all this. Communism, which menaced America for two entire generations, was a better idea than democracy, in theory. All property belongs to the people. Everybody gets the same share. Everybody makes the same amount of money. We are all equal. And all you need is people to supervise this.

How did America react when presented with the commentary, by Lenin and others, that Democracy would fall like an overripe apple when this glorious new way of looking at things was presented to them?

We'd fight like hell, which we did. The supervisors would be appointed, not elected, we knew, and they would take their orders from Moscow. Also, the supervisors would become very, very rich. Because people unfettered can be corrupted. They would be the only people who were rich.

Our system works. For us. Iraqis are an Arab people who for centuries have run their personal lives according to the tenets of Islam. In Islam, strict orders of righteous behavior come down from you know who. The Koran is very ethical and very moral but very harsh. It reads, all of it, like the first three books of the Bible wherein God is far less benevolent than he is in the later chapters. He doesn't want to hear anybody else's ideas in the beginning. Islam, therefore, being a stricter religion, is far more important to these people than Christianity is to the American people. Here, government keeps the peace. In Islam, government also keeps the peace, but it must be much stronger to stand up to the religion they have there.

That's the not so simple part of all of this.

So we got rid of a brutal dictator. Apparently, George W. Bush was of the belief that this brutal dictator, a man of greed, briberies and a nod to the religious rulers, was somehow supporting al Qaeda, a group that espouses this strict, uncompromising Islamic approach to the world. Hussein hated al Qaeda. Al Qaeda hated Hussein. He was just another "western" leader. Al Qaeda only wants to overthrow non-religious governments that have taken on "western" ways. They even say so on tape. That's the enemy.

Our sons and daughters are now fighting a war which they won almost one year ago, against an enemy that was a "westernized" dictatorship (of which there are many), to impose on them a government that they have never had before.

The Iraqis, with rifles they shoot in the air at weddings, are voting on this.

If America is going to become second fiddle economically during this coming century to any other country, it is going to be China. China is thriving because it is becoming "westernized." And you know what? Communists run it.

Pray that our troops come home, on time, unscathed, and healthy. They won a war. The dictator was toppled and is in our custody. It is enough.

As for the future, our military job abroad is against al Qaeda and all those religious maniacs who want to murder us because of what we believe.

And yes, it is possible that Iraq will deteriorate into civil war. Remember OUR civil war? We ran it. It ended. If anybody tries to separate the parties in an upcoming civil war in Iraq, it should be the UN. Not the US.

If anybody reading this agrees with it and has the ear of George W. Bush, tell him about it. Maybe he'll like these ideas. •

Randy Duax is the editor of online literary magazine LostinFront.com. He is currently a graduate student in the MFA writing program at Southampton College, and is writing a book of comedic fiction short stories. Following is the first half of the story A Misunderstanding.

A Misunderstanding

By Randy Duax

This is my third appointment. My doctor has had me come into his office twice this week and piss in a cup. Luckily for me though, he's decided to give me an x-ray today. I've been having acute abdominal pain for the past three weeks, and all he can tell me is that I might have protein in my urine. I don't even know what that means. I've been looking on the internet, but can't pin my other symptoms down to diagnose myself. Malabsorption? Glomerulonephritis? Jakob-Creutzfeldt Syndrome?

I hate waiting rooms. I hate waiting. I decide to use the restroom. I drank three cups of coffee before coming, figuring that they might ask me to pee in a cup again, but they told me I wouldn't have to.

I pick the urinal farthest from the door, even though no one is in the bathroom. I can't pee if someone is standing next to me, so I move as far to one side as I can, in case another person comes in. There have been times when I've really had to go, but someone was pissing right next to me, shoulder to shoulder, and I just couldn't do it. So I'll wait the other person out in those situations, staring at the tile in front of me. Always stare at the tile; never look down. If you look down, you are a fag.

There's no handle to flush. I lean back to check for one, and the urinal flushes itself. There's a red motion detector on the top of it. I smile, and I swing my hand in front of it, causing it to flush again. I test it a few times, seeing how close I have to be, and what exactly will trigger it. I do two urinals at once, with my left hand and my right hand, trying to get them to flush at the exact same moment. This is really neat. I master two, and decide to move up to three, but have to crouch over and crane my head for the urinal in the middle. Both hands are straight out, directly in front of the sensors of the left and right urinals, and my forehead is lined up with the sensor on the middle one. I count to three in my mind and jump back, seeing them all flush at once.

"Ha-ha!" I am pleased. I turn around and see an orderly staring at me. "I was just trying to get them all to flush at the same time..." I trail off and turn around to point at the urinals. He nods and keeps his eyes on me, as he steps up to relieve himself. I wash my hands quickly and return to the waiting room.

I sit back in my chair and watch the door to the restroom. I really don't want to have him look at me again. I feel shame.

A nurse stands up at the station. "Randy Duax."

"Yes! That's me!" I briskly walk to the door that leads to the back offices.

She leads me to an empty room and hands me a hospital gown.

"Take off all of your clothes, and put this on backwards. Across the hall is the x-ray room. We'll get you when we're ready, okay?" She smiles an unnatural nurse smile; it's not right for her to be happy—I could be dying. Nurses should only smile in pornographic magazines.

I nod, and she closes the door behind her as she leaves.

Put it on backwards? Huh. I guess it makes sense. If you put it on the way you're supposed to wear a hospital gown, with the opening in the back, the x-ray could have problems penetrating the cloth. If the opening is in the front, the x-ray will just have bare skin to contend with. I'll just have to pull it tight in front and keep it shut.

They'll come get me. I sit at the examination on the table for five minutes. Ten minutes. I open the door and peer out, but no one is coming yet. I'm bored. There are no magazines, or anything. In the corner of the room I'm in is a skeleton. I'm not sure if it's a real skeleton or not, so I walk up to get a closer look. Seems real enough. I tap the skull. It has a nice, hollow sound, and I tap it again.

I'm playing "Wipeout" on the skull. Well, I'm playing the drum part on the skull. I'm humming the guitar part . It's kind of creepy if I look into its eyes, so I try not to, and I concentrate on the song. After a minute, I get bored and turn around.

The urinal orderly is watching me.

I am frontally nude.

I pull the sides of the gown over myself and try to explain. "I was just..." I trail off again, and turn to point at the skeleton.

"Sir, are you ready for your x-ray?" The orderly is a very large man.

"Yeah, I..."

"Can you please put that gown on the right way and follow me?" He is speaking to me like I'm a child.

"She told me to put it on backwards." She did.

"I'll wait outside. Open the door when you are ready." He leaves.

I do not like this orderly.

rich land, reminding the rest of us that we all sit on the continent's most productive soil. Some of these farms still go down to the dunes, reminiscent of the views that once made up our whole shoreline. The families who continue to farm here are sharing with us their priceless patrimony. As far as those of us who wish to incorporate Sagaponack are concerned, their best interest is our best interest.

It is also in our best interest that all resources available – federal, state, county, town, and private – be directed in a unified and depoliticized way to the conservation of our beaches. Congressman Tim Bishop recently decried the president's decision to cut the Army Corps of Engineers shore protection budget. Assemblyman Fred Thiele has been an advocate for funding of shore protection projects at the state level. Southampton Town Councilman Dennis Suskind has proposed the creation of a Southampton Beach Conservancy to pool public and private resources to this end. We who hope to incorporate Sagaponack will actively advocate this cause on behalf of our hamlet, its residents and the wider community. The beaches belong to all of us. They constitute, besides the land, the most valuable treasure of all the citizens of Southampton.

My own hope is that the hearing on May 6th will be a constructive and unifying event that reaffirms the value of community and tradition. It is not our purpose to establish a secessionist village government to oppose the Town of Southampton but rather to secure the integrity of our hamlet for the future as a distinctive element in the heritage of Southampton.

The hearing on the incorporation of Sagaponack announced by Southampton Town Supervisor, Patrick Heaney, will take place at the Topping Riding Club at the corner of Gibson and Daniels Lanes at 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, May 6th.

Fuentes had served as the inspiration for the weathered fishermen in The Old Man and the Sea. In his essay, Buffett made a particular note of the man's rough, seasoned hands that had seen work through decades out on the water.

A parrot

Given Buffet's love for the water and beaches it was not surprising he made one of his homes in Sag Harbor, which George Washington once made an official port of entry in the post-Revolutionary days and which Herman Melville mentioned in Moby Dick. Melville's vignette of the village is particularly telling: one of Ahab's fated sailors is a south sea island cannibal, who shipped out on a whaler so he could see how the Christians lived. But when he got to Sag Harbor he was shocked at how they carried on — such drunkenness and tawdry revelry, etc. Perhaps Sag Harbor, at least until its "gentrification" in the 1990s, remained a hard drinking town and a welcome place for the gentleman from Margaritaville.

At any rate, no matter how rich Buffett had become (incidentally he is the distant cousin of financier Warren Buffett), he and Sag Harbor seemed a perfect fit. One local related how Buffett would fly between Winterhaven, Florida and Sag Harbor (specifically, East Hampton Airport), and would take the airport workers out for clams.

Another local once said it was a great feeling to go into the Emporium Hardware Store in Sag Harbor and be able to buy Jimmy Buffett tickets for a performance at Southampton College — where Buffett once played with James Taylor, whom Buffett grandly complimented as being "the Stephen Foster of our generation."

Not that Buffet has avoided more "glamorous" settings. At the wedding of Catherine Zeta-Jones and Michael Douglas, Buffett and Art Garfunkel followed a rousing one hour set by Gladys Knight with a compelling rendition of "Bridge Over Troubled Water."

Well into the millennium, Buffet shows no sign of letting up. He has his own record label now, Mailboat. He said that his former label wanted to pass higher costs on to the fans, and going his own way (which has always been his wont) would avoid that. His website shows him — and a parrot — on a hammock, with palm trees and a lovely horizon of water in the background. His Parrothead Radio broadcasts over the Internet. He believes that his continuous concert tours keep him with a steady fan base.

He flies one of his several airplanes across the Pacific for concerts in Hawaii. He has said he wants to do a concert in Diamond Head Crater before he dies. There is talk of him building an amphitheater, marina, and shops in the Keys. Buffett has got to be one of the most successful beach bums in history.

By the way, if you try to look up any Jimmy Buffet quotes, he usually immediately follows Buddha. Whether there is some meaning in that coincidence is for the reader to decide.

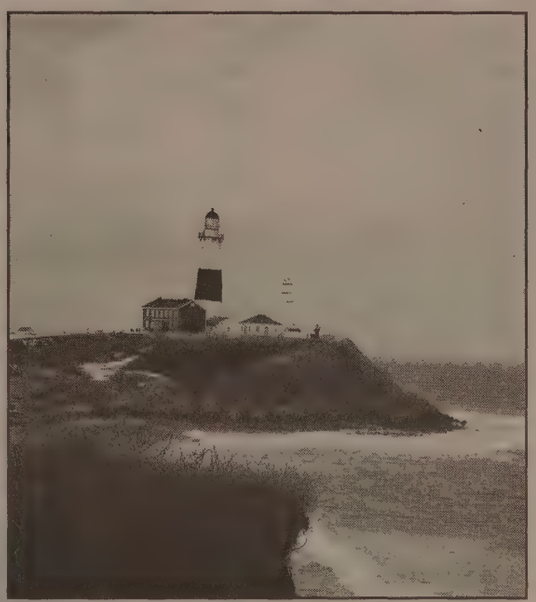
veteran warship, she was at this point an aging vessel, and no longer either the largest or the fastest. But she could handle the job, should the French venture out.

Documents of that time show that British officers were frequent guests of the residents of East Hampton and Gardiner's Island. In return, local residents such as minister Samuel Buell, D. D., were invited aboard the flagships of the fleet for an evening's meal and entertainment.



The Montauk Lighthouse was completed fifteen years after the wreck of the Culloden

On January 22, 1781, it was reported that three of the French ships at Newport had raised anchor and were preparing to head out to sea. Arbuthnot responded by sending five ships, the Royal Oak, the Culloden, the America and the Bedford and one other, out to meet them.

The intended battle never happened. Instead, nature took over. While the five ships were in Long Island Sound, a powerful winter storm hit the area, a full blown Northeaster, with snow so thick you couldn't see more than ten feet in front of you. The French captain immediately ordered his three ships to return to Newport, which they did. However, the British were caught in the storm. The Bedford lost her masts, the America lost her way in the snowstorm and survived but was not heard from for three days, and the Culloden was blown onto the reef at Shagwong Point in Montauk, where a hole was punched in her just above the waterline by a large boulder.

The captain of the Culloden, George Balfour, saw the damage but nevertheless ordered sails raised into the storm so he could try to make his way to calmer waters in Fort Pond Bay. He never made it. The ship filled with water, drifted westward and finally settled on a sandy patch on the bottom of the sea just a hundred feet or so off the westernmost point of Fort Pond Bay, at a spot which is today known as Culloden Point.

The crew waded safely ashore. And Captain Balfour, knowing that at the next low tide, the entire upper decks and superstructure of the ship would be visible above the water, ordered that everything that could be removed from the Culloden be taken off as soon as the storm abated. He did not want any of the ship to fall into rebel hands. A week later, the job was done. After that Captain Balfour had the masts removed so they could be refitted into the Bedford, which was at anchor nearby, and then had Culloden burned to the waterline.

The great treasure of this shipwreck remained entirely intact for the next thirty five years, through the surrender of the British to end the revolution, and the surrender again of the British in the War of 1812. But three years after that, salvagers for the American government lifted twelve tons of pig iron and cannons from the wreck.

Soon thereafter, with treaties made between the two governments, the British Government, by agreement, declared the remaining wreck of the Culloden as their property. And New York State, which controls the waters within a few hundred yards of shore, agreed to take the Culloden on, under its protection. There are penalties and fines for removing anything from the Culloden, though still people do.

Yesterday, an Internet search found at least one shipwreck artifact and coin dealer selling material from the Culloden. He is Daniel Frank Sedwick and he seems very above board about what he has. He holds auctions and showings and will sell items over the Internet from his Winter Park, Florida, headquarters. Among these are a Flint Stone, the actual stone that was cut down to make gun flints, with a "matte exterior but a shiny black interior, about 3" long." It is an artifact from HMS Culloden, and can be yours for the modest price of $25.

Today, much of the substructure of the Culloden can be seen in the sand on the ocean bottom. There are cannonballs, heavy cannon and other iron pieces. The viewing point and flight of stairs and parking area are currently under construction in Montauk. Skin divers and snorklers today say that to easily locate the wreck, go to the largest boulder at this viewing point and take a compass heading of 330 degrees. Climb down the bluff to the rocks and swim out to the Culloden, 150 feet off shore. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #294

A Boat Changes Everything.

Ah, it's officially spring.....many people on Shelter Island are starting to contemplate what they will plant in their gardens. They are the lucky ones. Gardening is soothing, peaceful and restoreth the soul. Then, there are the unlucky ones.... the people who have been thinking since New Year's Day about what needs to be done on their boats. As the weather warms, the call of the cruiser, the wail of the whaler and the yowl of the yacht will be heard in the minds of people all over the island.

There's a cute commercial now that says, "A baby changes everything." I'm not sure what it's selling, probably liquor. But I would like to challenge its claim. A baby only changes everything. A boat, however, changes everything and everybody!

They say a boat is a hole in the water into which money is poured. You can pour money into a baby, too, but a boat is a better expenditure. You can't sail a baby around the island. You can't fit a beer filled cooler, fishing gear, and six people into a baby and get anywhere, which proves my point. No matter how much money you put in a baby, the only return is 18 years of bills and aggravation, punctuated by moments of joy. With a boat, you can get a lifetime of bills and aggravation, but with a lot more parties. Boats are clearly better than babies.

Jack's Marina is fully stocked and grown men can be heard whimpering among the lanyards, fittings, ropes, and bells. Oh, you just gotta have a bell.....

People are sitting home and having conversations you would not believe...

"Look, Joe, we can live without electric for two weeks and pay LIPO suction next paycheck. We get the motor fixed now and we can get her in the water in a week. The kids don't do their homework anyway, why should they have lights? If they want TV that bad, they can get jobs."

In another island home....

"Look, Mary, we got tax refund for $834 , so honey, lets be practical. We can put it in Lucy's college fund, which would be good, we could put it in an IRA which would be better, either decision is wise and noble. On the other hand, we need canvas and cushions....Lucy thinks we're rotten parents anyway so we really don't have any image to live up to in her eyes... let her put her own ass through college, that's what we did."

And in another home...

"I don't know why the &$#! I married you! My mother said a mixed marriage would never work and she was right! Look, island people boat. It's what we do, like breathing. I'm sure there must have been something you did in Montana growing up that roughly equates to the joy of boating, but I can't imagine what it would be! Roof repairs have never and will never take priority over getting a boat in the water! My mother's roof has leaked in the kitchen for 20 years, and her mother's roof leaked before that. Did they care? No! Why? Because the boat was in the water! I was conceived on a boat....oh, now I have your attention. I'll tell you what, landlubber, you get my boat in the water and give you a new reason to live...."

And in yet another home on the phone....

"Yeah, Mom, they screwed up the tests. They don't know if Dave has AIDs or Alzheimer's. No, I got it covered. I'm just gonna let him take the boat out. If he finds his way home, we won't have sex."

And the coup de grace...

"So what's it gonna be, Bill, the wide screen digital TV or the boat?"

"Karen, how am I gonna decide between the two?"

"Take your time, baby, I know it's big decision."

"I get sex with the boat, right?"

"Yup."

..Ten minutes of silence

"I dunno Karen, I've seen all of you... but I haven't seen all the Jets games this season..."

"You'd trade intimacy for Jets games? Okaaaay....and what if we bought a bigger boat?"

"A bigger boat?"

"A bigger boat and a TV on the boat...."

"Ohhhh baby... !"

As I said.... a boat changes everything.....

BREAKING NEWS

Chairs Return to Sag Harbor

Thankfully, our right to sit and have a cup of coffee in Sag Harbor has been protected. The Southampton Town Justice Court dismissed the village's case against Java Nation. Sag Harbor passed a law in 1997 stating that retail food establishments should not have seating areas, but since Java Nation predates that law, they are permitted to keep their four stools and three tables. It is a free country, at least until Sag Harbor exercises its right to appeal.

Vigil for Peace in Sag Harbor

The East End Women in Black are back! This international network stands for peace and justice, and stands against war and occupation. The Women in Black began in Israel in 1988 as a protest against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza. Now there are Women in Black groups all over the world. These women use silence to make themselves heard. The public is invited to join these women the first Sunday of every month for a peace vigil. It will take place at 3 p.m. in Sag Harbor at Main Street and the wharf. For more information, call 631-831-4966.

Ammon Estate Has to Pay Taxes

The $55 million estate of the late Ted Ammon has accrued more than $6.8 million dollars in bills since his death two and a half years ago. Of this, $4.8 million has gone to lawyers, $1 million to accountants, and another $1 million in bank fees. JP Morgan Chase bank is both a co-executor of the estate and, not surprisingly, a major beneficiary. Ammon's adopted twins, both minors, do not have a lawyer to represent them in the matter. They are currently stuck in the middle of a custody battle between Ammon's sister and their long-time nanny.

Dunehampton Rejected in Court

Dunehampton's battle for incorporation has been shut down again. Justice J.J. Jones Jr. of the State Supreme Court upheld Southampton town supervisor Patrick Heaney's decision to reject Dunehampton's proposed petition. Jones Jr. agreed with Mr. Heaney's conclusion that the would-be village did not have the minimum requirement of 500 residents. Joseph Prokop is the lawyer representing Dunehampton's case, and said that he plans to appeal. Supporters of the village of Dunehampton object to Southampton's revised coastal erosion law, which would limit waterfront rebuilding, but critics feel that incorporation could raise property taxes and restrict resident's access to the beaches.

Morriss Center Presents

Alfie Kohn

The Morriss Center is proud to present Alfie Kohn, well-known lecturer and writer on contemporary pressing educational topics, on Wednesday, May 5th at 7:00 p.m. at Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor. The lecture, PERFORMANCE vs. LEARNING: The Costs of Overemphasizing Achievement, is relevant to parents, educators and school administrators, and is open to the public. This is Alfie Kohn's ONLY Long Island engagement in 2004.

There is no better way to destroy children's creativity — or their interest in learning — than by pushing them to work harder, get good grades, and score well on tests. As Alfie Kohn will argue, many schools' attempts to be academically rigorous tend to backfire because their traditional methods rely on outdated conceptions of learning. What matters is not how motivated students are, but HOW they are motivated — that is, whether they're excited by what they're doing in school or just focused on how well they're doing. When the point is for them to prove how smart they are, they become less inclined to engage deeply with ideas, to explore and discover. Kohn will invite us to rethink how students are evaluated (since no grade may actually be the best grade) as well as whether all the talk we hear about "higher standards" may have less to do with authentic challenge than with a simplistic tendency to confuse harder with better.

Alfie Kohn is the author of nine books, including PUNISHED BY REWARDS and THE SCHOOLS OUR CHILDREN DESERVE. He has been described by Time magazine as " perhaps the country's most outspoken critic of education's fixation on grades [and] test scores." Kohn lives (actually) in Belmont, Mass., and (virtually) at www.alfiekohn.org.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Round Table

It was a late Saturday night and a couple of my friends and I headed down to IHOP (The International House of Pancakes) to get a late night breakfast. IHOP is located about fifteen minutes outside of Boston and is the only place that I know that serves breakfast after midnight, which is kind of a big deal because I get hungry after midnight all the time.

We drove there in my friend Alex's car. He has an old, white, beat up Honda something or other with a stick shift. Alex drives his car like it is a Ferrari, shifting only when the engine is roaring at its loudest and accelerating as fast as he can at every light. When we got to IHOP, my face was as white as a ghost.

IHOP is like a castle on a cloud outside of Boston, where all they want you to do in this castle is drink hot chocolate and eat blueberry pancakes. Late at night, it is still very busy. I think that it is a place designed for kids and their parents, but obviously, at one or two in the morning, only twentysomething's are there. This is kind of cool because it has this neat, Disney Worldish feel to it, except that there are no little kids.

We got to our table, I ordered a hot chocolate and blueberry pancakes, my friend Alex ordered some bacon and eggs, my friend Erin ordered just regular buttermilk pancakes, and my friend Megan ordered banana pancakes. We were all drinking hot chocolate with whipped cream on top, and all of us intentionally dipped our noses in the whipped cream when we drank it, imitating Dr. Evil in the movie Austin Powers, "It's called a Belgian dip."

We were sitting around, talking about all different things, when Erin brought up the topic of what we are going to do when we graduate. This is a topic, as you may or may not know, that I really like to talk about. Erin had a game in mind that I had never really heard of before. She suggested that we go around the table, in a circle, and we should tell each person at the table what we think they should do when they graduate from college. Everyone said "cool," and the game started.

Erin was the first person to be analyzed by the round table. "I think that you should go into teaching," Megan said. "You are really good with kids and you look like you would make a good teacher."

"Thanks," Erin said politely.

"I think that you should be a teacher, too," Alex agreed.

"I think that you would make a good secret agent," I said. There were a couple of laughs at the table. "No, seriously. You are always wearing that leather jacket. You could be a girl James Bond or something."

"Thanks, Dave, I'll work on that," Erin said, as she sipped some more hot chocolate.

The discussion went on. It was Alex's turn. Alex, who stands at about six foot two and has blonde hair, just got accepted to Albany Law School in New York. Needless to say, he wants to be a lawyer. He looks like a lawyer, he acts like a lawyer. He is one of those guys. We all went around the table.

Erin: Lawyer, that's your plan.

Megan: Lawyer, but I think that you should be a good lawyer, not a bad one.

Me: Lawyer, man, that's your thing.

Megan was next. I was curious about her because her major is in political science.

Erin: You should work as one of those undercover journalists that find out dirty information about politicians.

Alex: You should just move to Washington D.C. and work at the Pentagon or something.

Me: I don't know. I think that you should be a rock star manager. You look like one.

I was dead serious when I said that. I think that she would make a good rock star manager.

Okay, it was my turn. I was really curious what they were about to tell me. I am going to get a major in finance, but I really have no idea what I am going to do with it.

Erin: You should be a writer. Like a male version of Carrie Bradshaw in "Sex and the City."

Alex: You should write children's books about ninjas, secret agents, and fighter pilots. No, seriously, I think you would make a good news anchor or something like that. You are always talking about politics.

Megan: I think you should be a columnist, too.

Me: I am a columnist. They don't get paid very much.

Megan: No, I mean you should be a columnist for a big magazine so that you did get paid a lot for it. Like Carrie in "Sex and the City."

Me: Carrie isn't a real person, guys. No, seriously, what do you think? I really want to know.

Erin: Seriously, Dave, you should be a writer. It's your thing.

Me: You are no help.

When In Manhattan...

Urban Floral

In the nonfiction book, The Orchid Thief, by Susan Orlean, later skewed wonderfully in the Kaufman brothers' movie Adaptation, John Laroche smuggles rare orchids out of Florida. He is portrayed as a man obsessed with these exotic, erotic, and stunning flowers, but he's far from alone in his love for the plant. Orchids have been represented in many forms of art over the years. From the intimately close paintings of Georgia O'Keeffe to the sexually charged photos of Robert Mapplethorpe, they represent something beyond their beauty. Orchids are iconic and sophisticated, and take care and commitment. In the wrong hands they can continuously refuse to bloom, but in the right ones, orchids are among the most incredible members of the plant kingdom.

This week, thousands of vivid and exotic orchids will be on view under a tent floating over the ice rink at Rockefeller Center in Manhattan for the 24th New York International Orchid Show. Sponsored by REALITIES, a unique new apparel line created for the dynamic lifestyle of the modern woman, this world-class show is hosted by Tishman Speyer Properties and is organized by the Greater New York Orchid Society. The society meets on the fourth Wednesday of every month at Providence Rest Home Auditorium at 3304 Waterbury Avenue in the Bronx. Meetings consist of presentations from orchid experts from around the country in addition to a table of blooming orchids grown by members for view and discussion. A monthly convergence about flowers may border on the nerdy, but Rockefeller center isn't so exclusive. With its large attendance figures (200,000 people in 2003), second in the world after the Japan Grand Prix International Orchid Festival in Tokyo, the New York show is the largest in America. Orchid "trees" covered with live flowers will mingle with beautiful exhibits created by more than 60 specialists from around the world. Nearly 10,000 orchids, including more traditional flowers, newly formed hybrids, and rare and unusual species that our friend Laroche might drool over will pervade the tent, while special cases will contain fragile miniature orchids. Beyond the purely natural, top floral and Ikebana designers will create artistic arrangements.

Beginning on Thursday, daily tours will be led by experts and complimentary lectures and workshops will be offered. In the Concourse, orchids that might not be of the poached variety will be on sale from more than 40 vendors. Leading international commercial growers will offer between 50,000 and 70,000 plants. Orchid books, botanical prints, jewelry, gifts, and supplies will be also be available to buy. On Wednesday, April 14th, American Orchid Society and selected international judges judged the show. Awards presented include 24 major trophy awards, 30 AOS awards, 52 plaques and 600 ribbons. The Grand Champion Trophy and a $4,000 cash prize were awarded for the best orchid in the show, and the best exhibit received a $2,000 cash prize – a rare treat considering most shows turn their fragrance attuned noses up at cash prizes. In fact, the New York show was the first in the United States to have a fragrance competition. Special invited fragrance judges awarded the top orchids in their class. Hopefully, this weekend will show some spring weather, and a huge collection of some of the most sought after flowers in the world will be a perfect initiation to the new season.

The 24th New York International Orchid Show opened to the public on Wednesday, April 14th from 12 noon to 5 p.m. Remaining show hours are Thursday - Saturday, April 15th -17th, 9 a.m. - 9 p.m. and Sunday, April 18th, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Admission to the Orchid Show on the Rink is $5.00 and free for children under 12. Displays in the Concourse and the Lobby upstairs are free to peruse, as is the sales area (open until 6 p.m.). The Greater New York Orchid Society can be reached at 212-332-6577. –Oliver Peterson

Life's A Peach For An Adopted Cat

Hi, my name is Peaches. I don't have my own person yet, but Eddie is su-purr nice. I had a person once, a fantastic person, or so I thought, until I found myself stuffed into a cat carrier and left outside a local vet hospital. I was abandoned just like many of my friends here at the Southampton Inn's biannual adoption fair. It's a sad fact that one in three of us become strays. By the luck of the draw (I do have the longest whiskers), I was elected cat spokesperson.

I am not exactly sure where to begin. You see, no one has ever asked us to tell our side of the story. I won't bore you with the sordid details of life on the various hamlet streets – fending for scraps of food, rumbling with raccoons, dashing oncoming traffic, honing a keen sense of "stranger-beware" – just use your imagination. Without getting too New Age-y, I want to focus on the positives of what brought us together.

My feline friends and I are part of Operation Cat, a program guided by the Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons under the cooperation of Bide-A-Wee. According to Zoe Kamitses – she's the volunteer director of Operation Cat and a board member of ARF – "Op Cat is most likely the largest volunteer organization operating on the South Fork."

In the seven years Op Cat has been going, over 6,000 cats from Montauk to Westhampton Beach and Flanders have been "momentarily detained" and altered. The program's success is the result of the dedication of the volunteers, veterinarians and ARF and Bide-A-Wee staff who have banded together to help reduce the number of feral and stray cats. It's not about eradication, but the importance of managing the problems associated with abandonment.

This is where the program (I know it sounds cultish, but it isn't) plays an important role. Op Cat, a free service, is a self-help program enabling good samaritans, with ARF's assistance, to humanely trap feral and stray cats, bring them to a local veterinarian where they are altered, and then release them back to their colony. Did I mention the local vets who participate provide their services free of charge? Each cat also receives shots for feline distemper and rabies, and their right ear is notched to identify the animal as an altered cat so it is not mistakenly trapped again.

As part of the process, volunteers who bring in feral or stray cats fill out a form to register the colony. As it stands, there are 800 colonies. Each is headed by volunteer caretakers, who provide food, water and adequate shelter for the colonies, which range in size from two to thirty cats.

Another aspect of Op Cat, and the reason we're at the Southampton Inn, is that the majority of the program's members are re-introduced to domestic life via the adoption process. Volunteers pull out the kittens (go figure) and tamed or "previously owned" cats. Those of us who fall in the latter category are re-socialized and gradually learn to trust and love again.

And it's working. The number of new kittens is leveling off and over 53% of Op Cat felines have adopted persons. If today is any indication, this statistic will continue to rise. Seven have been adopted so far and we still have 90 minutes to go.

Well, if you take anything from my sermon on Catnip Mount, remember the importance of spaying or neutering your pet. And above all, investigate the alternatives to abandoning, because options exist. A place to start is through family and friends, and if that doesn't work, there are shelters.

If you are interested in being a volunteer (and I can't imagine you wouldn't) or would like more information about Op Cat, contact the Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons at 631-537-0400 or log on to www.arfhamptons.org. ARF is here to help; I know because I'm here and have a burgeoning fan club to boot.

Oh, before I forget, portrait artist Anne Watkins, who graciously offered her services at the Operation Cat adoption fair, can be reached at 212-866-0057. Anne is a wonderful painter and for those furry four legs doing the adopting, she's painted a watercolor portrait to commemorate the event.

Now, how about that belly scratch?

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

By Maria Tennariello

If you are looking for something different in Hampton Bays, look no further than Noel's, located in the King Kullen Shopping Plaza, 38 East Montauk Highway (631-723-2210). Noel's opened their doors last July, the second location for owner Noel Donohue.

Her first store, called Noel's Garden Cottage, has been located in Lynbrook for the past thirteen years. Together with a partner, William Nicoletti (his first venture), they decided the Hamptons was ready for another Noel's shop, and rightfully so. The new shop is managed by Noel's twenty-four year old daughter, Meghan Donohue, and a great job she does at that. The local residents have extended a warm welcome with many kind and encouraging words, and for that they are extremely grateful.

The shop is upbeat and is in full swing for the spring and upcoming summer season. It is filled with beautiful merchandise including candles, potpourri, table linens and silk floras and has a much-needed baby and bridal department for those special gifts. Some of their special lines include: Crabtree & Evelyn, Aromatique Home Fragrances, C&F quilted bags, Willow Tree Angels and Caspari paper goods. There are also many unique and eclectic items for summer entertaining that will fit everyone's pocketbook. Also available are unique accent pieces of furniture and bed linens. A very popular item at Noel's is their line of scented "Good Home" cleaning supplies for your spring cleaning needs.

Open seven days a week, Noel's is certainly a welcomed new addition to Hampton Bays.

Now that the freshness of spring is a promise, rejuvenating our bodies and minds is a priority for many East Enders eager to make our wearisome winter a memory. Discovering an extraordinary reflexologist who also specializes in beauty care and uses only the finest French beauty creams and lotions by G.M. Colin and Matis is a rare find.

To keep the pace with the response of her devoted clientele, Renata Lutkiewicz, celebrated East End reflexologist and aesthetician, (formerly associated with East Hampton's Susan Ciminelli Spa and Naturopathica) decided to open her own space called Renata European Beauty Service at the Harborview Professional Building in Sag Harbor. "Everyone appreciates being pampered in a private, tranquil setting," says Renata. "I decided to specialize in the two areas that make a real difference to our well being – the healing art of Reflexology, which can restore and maintain the body's natural equilibrium by the stimulation of reflex points on the foot that are linked to specific organs, and the curative art of Aesthetics, using the most effective blend of product and treatment applications to achieve and maintain optimum skin health. I also bring a European approach to my skincare treatments. My European facials, which include extractions and mini-reflexology treatments, are fully customized to the face and neck. I use the finest French products by G. M. Collin and Matis because the positive effects to the skin are immediate. When my clients are happy, I am happy."

Other individualized services by Renata are paraffin facials, enzyme peel facials, back pore cleansing treatments, eye print mask treatments, collagen treatments, and Vitamin C serum treatments.

There is a wide selection of G. M. Collin and Matis skin and sun care products, including La Jour anti-stress cream, La Nuit regenerating cream, Le Masque, and anti-aging kits such as Caviar Retinol, as well as Young Living Essential Oil Products.

To schedule an appointment, contact Renata at 631-725-7228. Her office is located at Suite #5 on the second floor of the Harborview Professional in Sag Harbor.

If you are looking for something really different in women's and children's clothing and accessories, stop in at Sassafras, located at 32 Montauk Highway in the King Kullen Shopping Plaza in Hampton Bays (631-728 7799). This eclectic shop was opened in Sept. 2002 by Tori Gainer and her mother D. Simon. They are both from New York City, and have always had a house on the East End. Tori ran stores in East Hampton back in the early nineties while working on her first B.A. at Southampton College. After the passing of her dad and the birth of her daughter Gracie, Tori and her mother, both shop-aholics, decided to open a boutique out east. They thought it would be a hit, and it has been.

Sassafrass, Hampton Bays

Tori and Dee buy product lines from all over the world: Brazil, England, France and of course the USA. They are very proud to say that the only merchandise purchased for the shop is merchandise that they would wear themselves.

There are many personal services involved in this shop, including a list to assure a girl who is attending the senior prom that no one else will be sporting the same dress by keeping a list of who bought what, for what event.

Sassafras carries designers that have been featured in Sex and the City, and Oprah O lists. Clients have worn their dresses on the red carpet to the Rock and Roll induction dinner and to the Grammy's, just to name a few. They also carry jewelry, bathing suits, hand woven pashminas, belts, shoes and bags as well as a great pair of slippers or a ylang-ylang hemp bar of soap.

This is a truly unique shop, as the owners are more geared toward customer service than making a quick sale. Both feel that honesty is the best policy and are not afraid to let you know if something you are trying on does not look right on you. Other designer lines that you will find here are Bella Dahl, Rock & Republic, R & B Blouse, Orla Kiely, Icon, Palmer Jones Pink Label, Da Nang, and so many more.

Once you shop at Sassafras, you will always go back for more...Open Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. And...there is always plenty of parking.

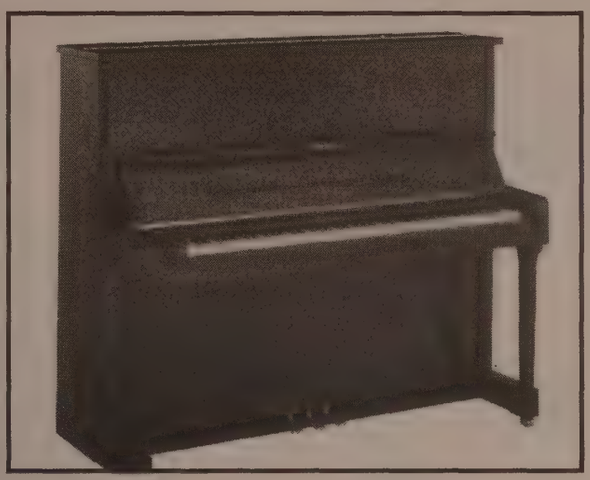
Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

I hope everyone had a wonderful Passover and Easter holiday last week. I certainly did. My family joined me for Easter Sunday, and we had a great time. Now with all the fun behind us, let's do something serious, like shopping...

It's the "Look For The Dots" on specially marked merchandise from now through April 28 at Dansk on Main Street in Southampton. Buy one, get one free (of equal or lesser value), with an added 10% bonus if your purchase is $30 or more (if you received the bonus post card in the mail). Look for the "Summer Mini Vase Trio" that is priced at $6.95 just for this sale. This sale is hard to beat!



A perfect addition to your deck this summer is the Rollup Awning located on North Highway in Southampton. Rollup Awning is offering free standard installation and a "jump start" coupon valued at $300 (with the coupon in Dan's Papers). Visit their showroom and check out the exclusive features and exciting fabrics available along with free in-home estimates. A cool way to welcome those hot days of summer ahead...

Speaking of summer, The Piano Barn on Montauk Highway in Water Mill is offering a summer piano rental/sales bonus of 100% towards the purchase of a selected variety of pianos. Free delivery is included in this deal.

A "Storewide Spring Sale" is in progress at B & N Furniture & Sleep Shop on County Road 39A in Southampton, boasting extra savings on winter stock. You will find sofa beds starting at only $499, Queen sets of bedding starting at $299 and comfy recliners that start at $299, to mention a few...Stop in and see what this sale is about. You will save bucks here.

At Bayberry garden center on Montauk Highway in Amagansett, the spring sale will save you 40% off on a variety of different ornaments, sculptures, and containers. The owner has spring fever and you will love his choices of Italian terracotta containers and curved stone benches, most birdbaths, some umbrellas and glazed ceramic pots in a variety of fresh spring colors. Also reduced are popular English stone pieces including exclusive Chilean stone items. There is also a normal fall sale on hard goods, and a 25% savings on the rest of Bayberry's furniture, lanterns, baskets, wind chimes, weathervanes, hats, fountains, birdhouses and everything else that is un-plantable. Now is the time to start sprucing up your home, patio and deck. Get it? I did!

Just a little shopping news; White's Pharmacy on Main Street in East Hampton, where there is a wonderful source of cosmetic lines, is introducing Antonia's Flowers' entire fragrance line exclusively! I just thought you should know that.

Sag Harbor was bustling this past weekend with locals, tourists and visitors checking out the shops and doing last minute shopping for the holiday. At D.J. Hart on Main Street there is always something going on as she makes room for her brand new inventory. New merchandise is arriving daily including clothing, accessories, bath and beauty products, Crabtree & Evelyn, and handmade, one-of-a-kind jewelry made by Dee. This is a must-see shop that has lots to offer.

Nearby at the Emporium True Value Hardware store on Main Street in Sag Harbor, look for their monthly bargains at great low prices. One that I picked up this past weekend was the GreenThumb three-piece extendable handle garden tool set for only $9.99. Get gardening!

Sag Harbor Pilates on Long Island Avenue in Sag Harbor is offering a "New Client Special". For $225 you will get three private sessions with certified trainers. Check it out.

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops, sales or where to find something special, please email me at: shoptil@danspapers.com, or fax me at 631-537-0500. I would love to hear from you...

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

After weeks of feasting during the spring holidays I'm ready to focus on fish. During a visit to one of our local fish markets, I noticed some marvelous looking monkfish tails from our local waters, firm and glistening white. The fillets are a remarkable contrast to the look of the whole fish, which has been referred to as a fearsome beast and was literally a throw-away fish a decade or more ago. It is a rather ugly fish that appears to be all mouth, but in fact is all tail, arranged in two neat rounded fillets. A thin veil of tissue appears on one side of the fillet after it is skinned and should be removed, because it shrinks as the fish cooks and causes it to tighten.

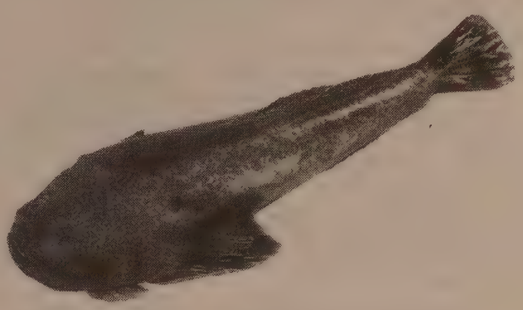
Monkfish has been revered in Europe where it is called lotte in France, rape in Spain and coda di raspo in Italy. Here in the United States we have come to know and enjoy this delectably sweet fish. It is sometimes referred to as the poor man's lobster in that it has a similar texture and is best used in sautés, fish soups and stews. While the price of fish in general has skyrocketed, monkfish is reasonably priced by today's standards.

In the following recipes, nuggets of monkfish are poached in a spicy tomato sauce or cut into medallions and coated with peppercorns and sautéed – two delicious ways to enjoy this local fish.

MONKFISH POACHED IN SPICY TOMATO SAUCE

Monkfish is often referred to as the poor man's lobster. In the Mediterranean it is called by its French name lotte but is rarely called anglerfish, which is what it is. This unattractive fish has very firm white tail meat. It's best used in sautés, soups and stews.
Serves 4

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 shallots, finely chopped
4 fresh tomatoes "on the vine" peeled, seeded and diced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/8 – 1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 cup dry white wine
1/2 cup vegetable or chicken stock
2 tablespoons finely chopped flat leaf parsley
1 tablespoon fresh thyme leaves
1 1/4 pounds skinless monkfish fillets, cleaned of gray tissue
1 tablespoon capers, rinsed



1. Warm oil in a large skillet or Dutch sauté pan with cover. Sauté shallots for 2-3 minutes and put in the tomatoes. Season with salt, pepper and add pepper flakes according to your level of taste for heat. Simmer for 3-4 minutes and add wine. Bring the wine to a boil, adjust heat and simmer until liquid is reduced by half. Add broth and herbs and bring to the edge of a boil. Remove from heat. The sauce can be made several hours ahead to this point.

2. Cut monkfish into 1-inch serving pieces. When ready to serve bring the sauce to a simmer and put in the fish in one layer. Spoon over the sauce, cover the pan and cook for 6-7 minutes. Stir capers into the sauce and serve with roasted asparagus if desired.

MONKFISH AU POIVRE

As in the classic steak au poivre, medallions of monkfish are coated in a coating of crushed black pepper and sautéed.
Serves 4

1-2 fillets of monkfish, about 1 1/2 pounds
2-3 teaspoons crushed white pepper
Coarse (kosher) salt
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon unsalted butter, optional
Coarsely chopped parsley for garnish

1.Remove any gray tissue from tail and discard. Cut the tail into equal 2-inch pieces then cut into each piece cross-wise but not all the way through; open to butterfly. Rinse fish and pat dry with paper towel. Coat both sides of medallions with the pepper.

2.Heat oil in a large heavy skillet over medium heat. Put in the fish and sauté for 2 minutes until lightly browned. Turn fillets, cover the pan and cook 2 minutes longer. Transfer fish to a side plate.

3. Add shallots and white wine to the skillet and bring to a boil. Cook over medium heat and reduce liquid by half. Add butter, if using, and stir to enrich pan juices. Return monkfish to skillet, spoon over pan juices and cook 1 more minute to heat though. Serve with chopped parsley garnish.

Babette's is extending their $19.95 three-course prix fixe over the next several weeks. The prix fixe, which is available on Friday and Saturday evenings, includes your choice of appetizer, entrée and dessert. The East Hampton eatery serves breakfast and lunch on Fridays from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. and Saturdays from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Dinner is served Friday and Saturday evenings from 4:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. and brunch is served Sundays between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.

Every week 75 Main hosts four very different themed events. The schedule of ongoing day and nighttime entertainment includes: Wednesday Night Swing Instruction beginning at 7 p.m. Cost is $10 (or complimentary with dinner). Drink specials are also available. Thursday Havana Nights begins at 7 p.m. with Latin dance instructor Oscar Gonzales. Drink specials and complimentary tapas are offered at the bar. Cost is $10, includes one cocktail (or complimentary with dinner). Karaoke Friday begins at 9:30 p.m. Enjoy two for one drink specials from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. Prizes are available, along with complimentary hors d'oeuvres. Sunday Afternoon Happy Hour is from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Two for one drinks and complimentary hors d'oeuvres are on hand. A live band plays all your favorites and takes requests. Dinner is served from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Call 283-7575 for more info.

Yet another reminder, La Fondita reopened yesterday (Thursday, April 15th). Serving authentic Mexican cuisine, the Amagansett take-out restaurant will be open Thursday through Sunday for the time being. Call 267-8800 to place an order.

Also open Thursday through Sunday, The Maidstone Arms Inn and Restaurant serves a three-course luncheon Thursday through Saturday for $19 and a three course dinner Thursday through Friday for $25. The Sunday a la carte brunch is also quite popular. Call 324-5494 for details.

The much anticipated Windows on Long Island event will take place on Monday, May 3rd from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Capitale Restaurant in Manhattan. Presented by the Long Island Wine Council, the gala will benefit Earth Pledge, a nonprofit foundation organized to promote sustainable agriculture, cuisine, and architecture and design. Thirty Long Island vineyards, as well as more than twenty five New York City and Long Island restaurants, will be on hand presenting signature wines and dishes to all in attendance. Tickets are $125 for Grand Tasting ($150 at the door) or $250 for VIP. Call 212-725-6611 ex 225 for details or to purchase tickets.

Sam's Restaurant (324-5900) on Main Street in East Hampton is now offering some great dinner specials. The Italian eatery offers a "buy one entrée get the second entrée at half price special" every Wednesday night. Thursday nights get a large 16" pizza for the price of a medium pizza or get a medium for the price of a small. Eat in or call and pick up. Sam's is open every night of the week, with the exception of Monday.

Called "Incomparable" by The TV Food Channel, The Lobster Roll, also known as LUNCH, has reopened for the upcoming summer season. Located midway between Amagansett and Montauk on Route 27, The Lobster Roll is open Friday through Sunday for lunch and dinner. Call 267-3740 for more details.

Don't forget that you can place those hard to get reservations for Pacific East on the new premiere Hamptons website, www.easthampton.com. Log on now or call Pacific East for more info at 267-7770.

Hamptons Restaurant Week ended April 4th, much to the chagrin of diners on the East End. Be on the look out for next year's event, including even more restaurants, vineyards and other businesses. Let's keep this great event going for years to come!

A Masterpiece.

Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival 2004

Something's Gotta Give

and a student's short video: A Hamptons Story by Lucas Belliou

At 1 p.m. this Saturday, April 17, Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival comes to a screeching halt-ending with a BANG! not a murmur, presenting the recent, highly acclaimed, Something's Gotta Give. Giving the biggest bang for the buck is Diane Keaton's terrific performance as a dating-shy divorcee, unexpectedly the object of affection of an aging playboy played (as only he can) by Jack Nicholson. Their chemistry was bound to be explosive, but it was Keaton's TNT compound-fracturing delight that's moved mountains, rewarding her with an Academy Award nomination, Golden Globe and National Board of Review Awards.

If having Ms. Keaton and Jack in top form is something, how about the two of 'em in the fabulous Hamptons? That's something. That's about more glamour than a guy can take. I should know; it was shot not far from my place – I assure you, there was no rear projection on a Hollywood sound stage. The sound stage sets used are also Hamptons' property – Frazier Dougherty's Pinewood West Studios. Our beaches and rural lanes have never looked nicer, nor has Miss Diane, thanks to cinematographer, Michael Ballhaus. Something's script was written by its producer and director, Nancy Meyers, who stuffs the story with the comfortable, squishy kapok that we all know and have loved before. However, Something gives a lot more bounce to the plump coziness (I am not referring to Nicholson's bared bare behind).

Talents like Francis McDormand as Keaton's sharp-tongued sister and Amanda Peet as her daughter give the women the upper hand in kneading a plot that starts with Jack coming out to the Hamptons to spend a weekend romancing the much younger Amanda in her mother's beach house. Further complications arise with Jack's heart attacking him. The attending doctor, Keanu Reeves, assures Amanda, "Your dad's going to be okay." Not funny to Jack who suddenly feels his heart going out to an "older woman," of all things. But, being weak – you might say weak of heart – he stalls. In jumps Keanu, who doesn't see Diane as an "older woman." I let you take it from there. What do you give a woman who has everything? More.

I beseech you to get to Chancellor's Hall at Southampton College as early as possible, as we have a big program. A student's video about the recently convicted criminal Christopher Rocancourt, who duped Hamptonites out of thousands of dollars, will be shown first. And, live, the up-standing Frazier Dougherty to describe the making of Something out here. I am your host, Guy de Fraumeni and, as such, I'll attempt to assist in taking you through this dynamite show with Sarah Halsey and solid refreshments – not paltry Red Cross doughnuts. This is quality stuff and, it's FREE.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

Dan's Papers* They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Spring 2004

April 17th 1 p.m.

Something's Gotta Give* (2003)

A young man (Keanu Reeves) plays a doctor caring for a man (Jack Nicholson) who suffers a heart attack at the house of his young girlfriend's mother. While there, the elder man falls in love with the mom (Diane Keaton). The doctor also finds he has an attraction to her despite their age difference.

A Hamptons Story, a short film by student Lucas Belliou, will be shown. The documentary follows the story of career criminal Christopher Racancourt, who conned wealthy Hamptonites and was exposed by artist Ginas Serran-Pagan.

Hosted by Guy De Fraumeni, and Sarah Halsey
Hollywood Film Critic and Oscar and Film Festival Movie Judge.

Hellboy

Out of a cantankerous, ornery nature, my personal feelings tend to embroil my usually rational critiques. Another personal motivation has me reviewing Hellboy, the latest comic book superhero movie, rather passionately since it stars Ron Perlman, who's relatively unknown to U.S. audiences. He is, however, known to me personally and professionally for his work in Europe, note for instance his role in the marvelously French fantasy, City of Lost Children (1995) and, here, in TV's Beauty and the Beast. Now, as Hellboy, the devilish, sensitive brute, he, personally, gives the character a soul. Yes, it's his talent, not my bias, and it isn't that his characterization of the boy from hell who combats evil shares the enjoyment of chewing on a cigar, as I do. He chomps on cigars as he wields his muscular power against metaphysical forces that might otherwise be unbeatable.

Ron Perlman has never been touted as a handsome leading man. Far from it. The heavy monstrous appliances to his face (including two shorn-off horns) almost improve his looks. Sorry, Ron. His large, bulky body – almost "Hulky" – needs very little help with super-strong empowerment. But, take a good, strong look at how his performance exudes sympathy and other nuances rare to portrayers of superheroes. I hesitate getting into other anatomical extravagances like a tail (the little devil!) and a craggy rock-like arm and hand. For reasons why he has these appurtenances, I refer you to the film's opening, backgrounding World War II evil-doing, wherein Hitler gets a truly mad Rasputin to cut through interdimensional time and space and come up with some extra-nether world creatures to destroy the Allies (that's us, for you younger filmgoers). I don't know if Churchill or Betty Grable had a hand in it, but one of those really bad creatures came on to our side. It was a little tad, a lot pinker than pink and with a long, pointed tail. He is raised by our scientists, who have a hard time keeping up with his appetite for food and beer and later, as Rasputin produces many more weirdoes our red-skinned hero might crave one or two, while destroying others. A superhero's life ain't easy.

Comic book characters not only have to fight off ghoulish enemies – they have to battle the memories of all the other justice avengers that have gone before. Maybe it's because so many are masked that they bear such similarity to each other, but with Ron's face that's not a problem. Hellboy's director, Guillermo del Toro, also directed the recent Daredevil, with the affable Ben Affleck in red dominatrix leather. It was a clunker, but Hellboy was heaven sent for Mr. del Toro. The damp hallucinogenic gothic floridness of Mike Mignola's "Dark Horse Comics" is wonderfully overstated by del Toro, giving it a zany, free-flowing fondness for the horror genre that balances dynamics with a sort of scruffy, off-handed imbalance of fun and games vs. pyrotelekinesis. He smears eerieness over a livid elegance of blood-letting, screw-ball comedy. One could almost be oblivious to blood oozing from rotting flesh, or at best, laugh at it 'cause under the slimy latex is a soul that's been forced upon it by Ron Perlman, who has the great good sense to do it with bashing good wit.

Guy Jean de Frumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

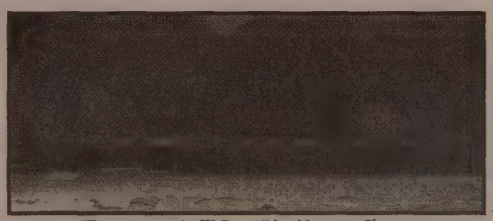
ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

HERMAN CHERRY
AT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

While "Probing Color" may be the title for Herman Cherry's current show at Southampton College's Avram Gallery, it is the artist's "probing thoughts" which are most intriguing to this critic. Mr. Cherry's paintings not only evoke his written statements (or perhaps it's the other way around) but also prove once again the aesthetic/philosophical connections between images and words.



"Dreamscape in III Parts," by Herman Cherry

First, let's consider Mr. Cherry's images recalling The Washington Color School and works by Kenneth Nolan: geometric structures, which have been characterized by some as cold, analytical and non-emotional. In a word: intellectual.

This is not to say that Mr. Cherry's pieces fit the category. His colors, for one, are not only lively, but filled with backgrounds which defy coolness: for example, subtle purples, changing slowly the more we look at them. Not all the forms are hard-edged, either, a trait also associated with coldness. Many configurations, in fact, approach Abstract Expressionism, namely "Dreamscape in 111 Parts."

Next, Mr. Cherry's statements about his visual imagery, particularly color, also reinforce subjective, personal and emotional responses, another indication that the artist's work defies common opinions of The Washington Color School.

Consider Mr. Cherry's statement concerning color: "I react to color the way some people react to pain and tenderness. I only know what I am doing after I've finished what I'm doing." Or this statement: " Colors are humanoid things to me – they take on qualities like objects. They meet, separate, are heavy, light, warm, cold, sympathetic or antagonistic..."

Mr. Cherry's poems help define his art as well. Here's a sample:

In the deep forest we are / suddenly an inspirational light

streaks a tree trunk / or a pile of leaves / or a hidden corner

rarely touched by the sun / as suddenly it disappears / quiet darkness returns / life moves silently in the deep damp forest of the earth.

It's evident that the poem expresses Mr. Cherry's wide range of deeply felt sensibilities about color: light/color makes life possible, and these same qualities allow the artist to "expand his universe," not merely to "collect data."

The current show will be on view at Southampton College's Avram Gallery until April 30.

Honoring the Artist: Jane McNichol

The term "Minimalism" is one that comes easily to mind when speaking with this week's cover artist, New York City resident Jane McNichols. It's not that Ms. McNichol uses such a style, as a glance at the cover reveals. It's simply that she has a penchant for sparseness and a process she describes as "paring away."

This sparseness pervades both Ms. McNichol's work and her lifestyle, although it's not always apparent. Consider her art, for example. She doesn't employ a lot of paint; her reduced images bordering on abstraction.

Conceptually speaking, this "stripping away" of elements allows us to see the light, a primary preoccupation for this artist. It also permits her to paint deep, flat spaces, especially found at Orient Point, the subject of our current cover.

Sparseness relates to other factors in Ms. McNichol's life. Take her East Village apartment, which she shares with her artist husband, James. "It's sparse for sure," she remarks, adding that the couple also has a studio in Williamsburg where more room is certainly an advantage.

Another advantage of having her husband share the same space is that he gives her feedback on her work. "He's my editor," Ms. McNichol remarks with enthusiasm. "He's an invaluable tool, another eye. It's another level of intimacy with your spouse."

Ms. McNichol also describes one of her favorite places as "sparse," noting that Springs "has an American look, unchanged, with spectacular light, pure landscape and water." It seems as if Ms. McNichol is attracted to uncluttered locales, simple and plain, but close to nature. As a case in point, she's presently in Maine, where she resides from time to time. Asked where she'd like to have a studio, she answers, "In a beach shack near the water." You can't get any more sparse than that.

Ms. McNichol's daily routine is not sparse by any means, however; she works at her art five days a week, often biking around the city with her paints and camera. She loves the inspiration that Manhattan living provides, including being "surrounded by creative people."

An urban setting surely brings back memories to Ms. McNichol, who grew up in Philadelphia and studied at Temple University and Tyler School for Art. We wonder if that's why she is drawn to nature and particularly the ocean. And to sparseness as a counterbalance to big city clutter.

Ms. McNichol is not concerned with such matters, however. She's too busy creating art, realizing that "the older you get, the harder it gets to do good work." –Marion Wolberg Weiss review: big bill, cirque jacqueline, & my arm....by gordin & christiano

Biographical tales are making their presence felt on the Off-Broadway theatrical scene in vastly dissimilar locations and settings, arriving there by way of uniquely different routes.

The Lincoln Center Theater is presenting Big Bill, a new play by A.R. Gurney (The Dining Room, The Cocktail Hour), at its Mitzie E. Newhouse Theater. Big Bill, which arrives in New York virtually intact from the Williamstown Theatre Festival where it was performed last summer, tells the story of William Tatem Tilden II known as "Big Bill," the first celebrated tennis star, who dominated the game in the 1920s by winning seven U.S. Championships and being the first American to win at Wimbledon.

The story examines the life of the admired celebrity, whose habit of picking up teenage boys was his ultimate downfall. The play, which jumps backward and forward in time, is effectively engaging as a biography, showing many of the dichotomies inherent in Big Bill's character, as well as giving much information pertinent to his life and the times in which he lived. But it fails miserably as drama. There are several undeveloped themes begging for closer scrutiny and the conflicts hidden within them are never played out, leaving us vaguely unsatisfied. The evening, ultimately, is a bit of tease.

The play, however, is given a first class production boasting a fabulous set by John Lee Beatty and a charismatic star performance by John Michael Higgins (Best in Show), who is most adept at capturing what must have been Big Bill's flamboyant personality. He is supported by a talented cast playing multiple roles that includes Margaret Welsh, David Cromwell, Stephen Rowe, Donal Thomas-Cappello, Alex Knold, Michael Esper, and Jeremiah Miller. The direction, too, by Mark Lamos, makes the most of what is here, but if only the story behind the facts had been fleshed out, the evening might have been as illuminating as Mr. Beatty's wonderful set.

On the Upper West Side, Cirque Jacqueline, a behind-the-scenes look at Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, written and performed by Andrea Reese, recently opened at the Triad Theater. The critically praised one woman show, directed by Charles Messina, has settled in for a comfortable run at the Triad, more than two years after its first performance at New York's Titans Theatre. Ms. Reese, who has heard all her life that she resembled Jackie O, was first encouraged by downtown's Flea Theater director Jim Simpson to develop the script about the First Lady, who was an icon of style. Since its first performance, Cirque Jacqueline has consistently played to sold-out audiences at various venues along the East Coast and in the metropolitan area. Of special interest is the show's use of music to underscore its message and bring the story to a younger audience. Much of the evening is staged to the punk rock music of the Misfits and Strung Out.

Off-Broadway's newest destination and newest theater complex, 59E59 Theaters, is presenting Brits Off Broadway, a drama fest of new British Theatre. First up in Theater C, the smallest of the complex's three theaters, is My Arm, written and performed with great style by Tim Crouch. My Arm, which was a surprise hit at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in Britain, is an intelligent yarn about a boy growing up in the Isle of Wight during the 1970s. The compelling story puts a pseudo-autobiographical spin on the fictional tale about the boy, who decides at the age of 10 to raise his arm over his head and keeps it there for the rest of his life.

The solo piece is a charming, thought-provoking meditation on choices and the ego's need to be acknowledged, which ultimately proves destructive. Mr. Crouch is a skilled narrator with impeccable timing, who uses home movies, a live video camera and items collected from the audience, as well as silences, to tell his oddly touching story, which had its first reading with the Franklin Stage Company in New York in September 2003.

It subsequently previewed at the Zipper Theatre, New York, and at Battersea Arts Centre, London, before making its world premiere at the Edinburgh Festival this past July.

Brits Off Broadway will take over all three theaters at the 59E59 complex from April 7th through July 4th. Next up in Theater B is Sun is Shining by Matt Wilksinson, a dark comic story of the love affair between a mixed raced city trader and a recovering alcoholic artist, from April 20th until May 9th.

Big Bill is playing at Lincoln Center's Mitzi E. Newhouse Theater, 150 West 65th Street. For tickets, visit the box office or call Tele-Charge at 212-239-6200.

Cirque Jacqueline is playing at The Triad Theater, 158 West 72nd Street (between Amsterdam & Columbus). Performances every Wednesday at 7:30, March 17- April 21, and then every Thursday at 7 p.m. June 24 – July 22. Tickets are $30. Call 212-352-3101 or www.TheaterMania.com

My Arm is now playing in Theater C at 59E59 Theaters (between Madison & Park). For tickets call 212-753-5959 or www.59E59.org

preview: the cherry orchard....by jan silver

The John Drew Theater at Guild Hall in East Hampton brings a full-scale production of a theater classic to East End audiences each spring. In past years, it has been a Shakespeare play, but this year it is Anton Chekhov's The Cherry Orchard.

Opening this Friday, August 16, at 8 p.m., The Cherry Orchard can be seen Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday matinees through May 1.

The play tells the story of a once-wealthy Russian family who must sell the beloved cherry orchard on their country estate in order to survive financial ruin. Madame Ranevskaya, the widowed owner of the estate, is forced to return from Paris (where she irresponsibly spends her dwindling funds) to deal with her family's financial situation. Neither she nor her brother Gayev or other members of the family and household seem capable of understanding what is happening to them. Only a nouveau-riche local merchant Lopakhin, son of a peasant, grasps the gravity of their situation.

Written at the beginning of the last century, The Cherry Orchard deals with issues we continue to wrestle with today – the clash of social classes, a changing culture and a region's shift from farmland to summer cottages. The Russian aristocrats' traditional values are challenged by an emerging new order. The orchard will have to be cleared, subdivided and sold at auction to support them.

Josh Gladstone, the John Drew Theater's artistic director, finds the play "sexy, hilarious and often heartbreaking" as the characters are thrown together as if in a dream, each one searching for happiness. He has directed many successful productions at the John Drew including Romeo and Juliet, Julius Caesar and the comedy Don't Dress for Dinner, and is directing this production.

Gladstone also sees The Cherry Orchard as a "very fast-paced, funny boulevard comedy filled with desperate people longing for love and connection, yet incapable of getting beyond their own neuroses." He chose Emily Mann's recent adaptation of Chekhov's script because "it combines comedy with tragedy" and "her emphasis on the vernacular provides language that flows smoothly for modern audiences."

The cast features professional actors, designers, and guest artists including Kathleen Huber as Madame Ranevskaya, Gerard Doyle as her brother Gayev, Michael Nathanson as Trofimov and Joe DeSane as Lopakhin. Manhattan designer David Martin created the sets, Kate Mueth is the choreographer and Terry Winchell is musical consultant. Three-year-old August Solomon Gladstone, son of Kate Mueth and Josh Gladstone, makes his stage debut as Grisha.

The Cherry Orchard was first produced in Moscow in 1904, so this year marks the 100th anniversary of this still very relevant play. Tickets are $20 for adults and $15 for students and Guild Hall members. They are available at the Guild Hall box office two hours prior to curtain time or from Theatermania (1-866-811-8411 or online at www.theatermania.com)

The Passion Of The Color

Can the colors surrounding you in your home and work environments affect your mood?

Film buffs may know that Italian director Michelangelo Antonioni had a painting crew on hand at all times during the filming of his first color feature, Il deserto rosso (The Red Desert) in 1964. The painters were there to custom color every background to the director's specifications. With his first foray into color Antonioni hoped to alter the mood of his carefully composed images by changing the colors to suit the themes of the film and the states of the characters. He sought to create an emotional landscape, using all the elements of the background, including color. He even went so far as to change the color of a ceiling in mid-scene to connote a change in mood.

Our reaction to color seems to go beyond mere associations (i.e. blue with sky or sea, green with grass and trees) to a response triggered in the brain by the shade and color.

In a broad way, hues in the red area of the color wheel are called warm, while those in the blue and green range are referred to as cool. These terms are relative rather than absolute. World renowned color authority and author, Faber Birren, defines this commonalty of the colors of the spectrum by associating each with two moods. The warm colors such as a red and its neighboring hues are active and exciting. The cool colors, which are passive and calming, are blue, violet and green. Likewise, light colors are active, while deep colors are more likely to be passive. Modern researchers in Japan put their finger on just this point. Choku Akashi, in 1986, demonstrated that red is often felt to be active and may be connected in some circumstances with aggression. In contrast to the warm colors, the cool colors are inactive or passive. Faber Birren said, "The rather strong observation is to be made that division of the spectrum into warm and cool colors holds very evident and simple meaning with reference to human personality." Indeed, though the conclusion may be largely empirical, warmth and coolness in color are dynamic qualities. For example, emotionally, reds are exciting and blues are subduing. Physically and physiologically, the same sort of complementation exists. Red colors tend to increase bodily tension, to stimulate the autonomic nervous system, but green and blue colors release tension and have a lesser physiological effect.

Some researchers have worked with children in an attempt to discover if, and to what extent, human response to color is inborn or culturally conditioned. For their book Painting and Personality, Rose H. Alschuler and La Berta Weiss Hattwick had the opportunity to study young children and their painting over a long period of time and with a knowledge of their backgrounds. They concluded that a delight in color showed emotional tendencies, and the frequent use of blue or black implied self-control and repression of emotion. As might be expected, red had the highest effective value and revealed uninhibited expression. Green showed balance, fewer emotional impulses and a simple and an uncomplicated nature.

In an environmental study with color and light conducted by visual-arts professors Harry Wohlfarth and Catharine Sam of the University of Alberta, the color environment of fourteen severely handicapped and behaviorally disordered eight-to eleven-year olds was altered. After a change in color and lighting environment, the children's aggressive behavior diminished and their blood pressure dropped. Interestingly, the same effects were found in both blind and sighted children in Wohlfarth and Sam's study. This suggests that color energies effect in ways that transcend seeing. One hypothesis is that neurotransmitters in the eye transmit information about light to the brain even in the absence of sight, and that this information releases a hormone in the hypothalamus that has numerous effects on our moods, mental clarity and energy level. In what Wohlfarth calls the science of Colorpsychodynamics, colors that seem to increase blood pressure, pulse, and respiration rate are, in order of increasing effects, warm colors such as red, orange and yellow. These results corraborate Faber Birren's groundbreaking studies.

Antonioni himself experimented before filming Il deserto rosso to find the effects of different colors, so that he could, in turn, reverse it, and use the colors to accurately represent characters' emotional and psychological states. He once told filmmaker Jean Luc Goddard, "The interior of the factory seen in the film was painted red; two weeks later the workers were fighting amongst one another. It was repainted in pale green and everyone was peaceful."

Dan's Papers HOME GUIDE

Kelly's Cottage

Furnishing a small space can be challenging. I recently moved into a small one-room cottage, and my main concern was being able to fit everything I needed into this tiny space. The lack of storage was a huge obstacle; therefore I had to be creative with my furniture choices.

Working with a limited amount of wall space was also a major consideration while buying furniture. I began my project by measuring the length between each window, then sketched a floor plan. My list of essential items consisted of a comfy sofa, bed, armoire, kitchen table, kitchen cabinet and coffee table.

Photos by Kelly Krieger

A Cottage By The Sea

Another view

A combination of Shabby-chic meets beach/country cottage was what I envisioned. I couldn't wait to get a move-on, and decided to begin my search in Southampton. I checked out all the local shops, but it was at Rumrunner that I fell in love with my giant, plush, down-filled sofa. There was just one detail I neglected to find out. How big was my front door? Would this couch, which represented "love at first sight," make it to my new home but not through my front door? (Hopefully this will not be a metaphor for my future.) So, I ran (drove, actually) home, took the measurements and called the store immediately. Another tip: make sure you always write down the model number of furniture (something I also forgot to do). I described the couch, hoping someone else hadn't already bought it, and prayed they would tell me it could fit through my door. The green light was on. I never thought a couch could make me so happy, but it was all I could talk about for days. However, something told me to double-check my purchase, so I went to the store the following day after work. It was lucky I did. There were actually two couches with blue and yellow floral patterns and I had purchased the wrong one. Needless to say, Rumrunner was more than accommodating and realized it was a miscommunication on my part.

Next on my list was an armoire. My friend, Dan's Papers shopping columnist Maria Tennariello, referred me to Casual Home, located on Montauk Highway in Southampton. Upon my arrival, I knew I was in the right place. Casual Home offers a wide variety of white wash and other wood finishes that include shades of green, blue, pale yellow and other special custom colors. I was only interested in the distressed white cottage-style pieces, and my selection had to provide storage without looking like a typical storage unit. I have a lot of clothes and no closets. The challenge was finding items that could be functional without looking like they were part of a bedroom set. I opted for a leaded-glass console and a two-door shelving cabinet in place of a dresser.

Another functional purchase was an all-in-one bench/coffee table/book shelf. Well, let me explain. I needed a coffee table, but it had to be narrow enough not to take up too much space. This was the perfect solution. The top shelf surface is used to put a few of my decorative items on, and I've stored my books on the bottom shelf. This pine table is offered in a variety of sizes and colors.

For some finishing touches, I stopped by Pier 1 Imports in Southampton. It was at Pier 1 that I found an assortment of accessories and my bistro dining set.

Once I finished purchasing all the furniture I needed, it was time to arrange everything. The shape of my room is square, making it challenging not to create a boxed-in (closed-in) feeling. The attributes that it does have are lots of windows and a high cathedral ceiling. I decided to put the bed and the sofa on the same side of the room while placing the leaded glass piece in between to create a division. My armoire cabinet, TV and stereo are positioned on the opposite side making it easy to view and access. It did take me a few re-arranging sessions and several friends' opinions before I finally got it right. I also have a small loft space that accommodates extra storage. I decided I would use wicker baskets adorned with material around the top edges to give a decorative feel while allowing me to keep things tidy.

There are so many choices to make when decorating and furnishing any space. The key to any small space is to be creative. Everything must have its place and there is no room for clutter.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Dance of Dahlias (Part 1)

This is the first of a two-part article. Part 1 describes the history of dahlias, desirable varieties, and how to start them now to extend the blooming season. Part 2 discusses how to create an ideal garden environment to produce prize-winning flowers.

No summer garden is complete without dahlias! So dazzling are the large, colorful flowers that they quickly create a focal point.

Now is a great time to jump-start dahlias in a greenhouse or sunny window in order to extend the blooming season. Because dahlias are not winter-hardy, tubers must be planted after the danger of spring frost which means flowering will not begin until late July. Starting tubers earlier extends the blooming season by a month or more.

Dahlias have an interesting history. The tubers arrived in Europe at the beginning of the 19th century from Mexico. Andreas Dahl, the flower's namesake, was responsible for this introduction. Dahl thought dahlias were a useful vegetable.

Shortly after this introduction, breeders in Belgium hybridized plants and introduced large, double-flowered plants by 1815. Interest immediately shifted from the tuber as vegetable to the plant as flower. By the late 1800s, attention stormed throughout Europe and several hundred dahlia shapes and colors were available.

Today there are more than a dozen classified varieties. New colors and shapes, introduced yearly, add to existing varieties. Dahlia flowers range from very large, dinnerplate size of up to eight inches across, to petite pompons of two inches across. Plants range from dwarfs (ten inches to twelve inches tall) to giants (four feet to seven feet tall).

In addition to size, dahlias are classified by the shape and arrangement of petals. Generally, there are four categories: single, decorative, cactus, and ball. Single dahlias have one row of petals and grow to about two-and-a-half feet tall. Decorative dahlias grow taller, display larger flowers with multiple rows of petals, and are classified according to the flower size and shape - either formal or informal. Formals have broad, regularly arranged petals that curve back towards their stem; informals have irregularly arranged, often twisted, petals. Cactus dahlias display tubular petals. Ball dahlias and their cousin, the pompons produce ball-shaped flowers of smaller size.

All dahlias are hybrids. They typically do not grow to type from seed. Therefore, the best way to ensure results is to purchase tubers from garden suppliers. For 2004, a number of new types deserve consideration: Café au Lait–a mocha/pink-toned, dinnerplate dahlia on a 36" plant; Celestial Starburst – a magnificent, purple/yellow cactus dahlia on a 36" plant; Karma Dahlia, Sangria – a salmon/rose-tipped cactus dahlia on a 36" plant; and Nonette – a creamy-orange and red-stripped informal, decorative dahlia on a 28" plant. Grab these if you find them!

To get a jump start, use a one-gallon pot or pail for each dahlia. Prepare enriched soil consisting of one-third each compost, peat moss, and garden soil. Add one-fourth cup each of dolomitic lime and either bone meal or blood meal to each gallon of soil.

Fill the pot, leaving 3 inches of space at the top. Arrange a tuber on its side with growing eyes facing upward. (If no eyes appear, place the previous year's stalk facing upward.) Insert a stake in the pot to secure the plant as it grows. Cover the tuber with soil to within a half-inch of the top of the pot. If the tuber has sprouted, fill soil only to the top of the sprout. As the sprout grows, add additional soil to within a half-inch of the top of the pot.

Water generously. Since dahlias are heavy water drinkers, keep the soil moist, but not saturated. Place the pot in a sunny window or greenhouse where it will receive at least six hours of sun daily. As the tuber grows, it will produce multiple shoots. Thin the shoots to one to four of the strongest to produce vigorous and better-quality flowers. When the plant has grown to about a foot tall and has three or four pairs of leaves, it is ready for transplanting.

Look for next week's article on how to prepare a flower bed and cultivate dahlias to grow prize-winners!

Dan's Papers HOME GUIDE

Treat Your Windows Right

Planning the window treatment for your new home? Thinking of upgrading those old blinds, drapes, shades or curtains? At first glance this would seem to be a simple task, almost a non-event, but unless you are already certain of what you want, selecting the right window treatment is fraught with decisions based on multiple factors and is not for the faint-hearted or indecisive.

Let's start with some of the basics. The key factors to be considered include look – the style, space, color, fabric and ambience; function – light control, privacy, energy efficiency, safety, lift system and maintenance; and, of course, price. Most window coverings are blinds – the most popular; shades – the most versatile; curtains and drapes; shutters – the most expensive; and louvers which combine elements of the other four.

The 'look' is the decorative aspect you want to achieve in each individual room. Whether you are going for heritage, casual, classic, eclectic, country, contemporary, rustic or formal style, your window treatment selection should enhance the overall desired effect. The size, color scheme and how you use the room, as well as the shapes of the windows, the mood you want to create and the natural available light, will also impact your decision.

'Function' is more about need. Are you looking to control the light or heat that comes in, the heat that goes out, the blocking out of a particular view, keeping outsiders from peering in, easy maintenance or child safety (no hanging cords where there are small children) or motorized operation? Each of these aspects should be included in your thinking. And this is just the easy part. Once you figure all that out, you are ready to look at the various options to fit your style and functional requirements.

Blinds are by far the most frequently selected window treatment and come in natural wood, wood composite or aluminum. Slat sizes range from one-half inch to two inches, may be horizontal or vertical, and come in a variety of color choices. Composite blinds are an attractive option when you have high humidity or temperature – like a bathroom – or direct sunlight. There is no fading, warping or cracking. Aluminum blinds are the best alternative for light control and design possibilities.

In the shade family there are honeycombs, sheers, pleated, woven, Roman and rollers, offered in multiple styles, fabrics and colors. They can even be top-down. The honeycombs, which come in single, double or triple thickness, offer the best light control, are the most energy efficient and easy to maintain. The sheers are an elegant, drapery-like option that hang vertically, providing both privacy and light control. They come in several fabric types, but are costly and cannot be repaired if they tear or rip (no cats with claws here). The woven wood shades have a unique look and can even be painted to match your décor.

Louvers' 2" wide, attractive elliptical shape and lightweight construction are both soft and durable, yet allow maximum privacy and light control. An excellent choice.

If energy efficiency is of primary concern, you may also want to consider low-e, clear glass for your windows, which reduces heat leaving the room and prevents fading of rugs and furniture. A good place to look is the new window/door/cabinet showroom, Perimeters, the largest on Long Island, located in Water Mill.

The best-known and very reliable window treatment supplier is Hunter Douglas. Their website, www.hunterdouglas.com, is a treasure trove of information (some of which was used in this article), including an interactive Product Advisor which, after you provide answers to a few questions, steers you in the right selection direction.

There are a number of local shops to help as well, usually providing free consultation and measurements. These include Blind Visions, Hampton Blinds, Windows and Walls Unlimited, and Wainscott Windows and Walls who (disclaimer) provided the window treatment for my home and whose Gail Thompson generously gave me her time describing the ins, outs, ups and downs of various window treatment options.

Dan's Papers HOME GUIDE

On The Shelf

Walking down the park-side of Park Avenue one evening, I looked up and saw the most wonderful bookcases – floor-to-ceiling and wall-to-wall, crammed with large, heavy, important-looking books. I coveted them, but knew a home library was not in my immediate future. Instead, I bought a single unit for my books, which are now overflowing onto the floor in front of the shelves. I started to notice bookshelves could be used for more than what their name implies. Not only can they be functional, but they can also be decorative.

When shopping for bookshelves, you must decide how much space you have for the shelves, how you'd like to use them and how much you plan to invest. For those of us who don't have the room or the budget for custom-made floor-to-ceiling, wall-to-wall shelves, more affordable freestanding units can be found in most home decorating stores. Ikea holds a variety of these shelves. The "Billy" collection ranges from $118 to $568, and each unit has adjustable shelves to create the space for your own needs. For a more customized approach, Smartfurniture.com lets customers browse popular shelf designs and create their own designs based on space and intended use. The featured designs are versatile and unique, with the trademark holding block system so you can build horizontally, vertically and even diagonally. If you're not the creative type, the website has a toll free number where you can speak with a representative for free design assistance. Prices range from $50 to $560. Like Ikea furniture, Smartfurniture.com packs the order for shipment and leaves the customer to do the assembly.

Leaning bookcases are popular alternatives to regular shelving units. Crate and Barrel's design has five shelves and slants from the wall ($159, only available via internet or catalog). Although aesthetically it adds great dimension to any room, it's not exactly the type of bookcase to cram books on. Leaning bookcases can hold a few books, but are great places to display pictures, plants or vases, along with a decorative lamp. Similarly, the Display Bookcase at Pottery Barn lives up to its name ($669, catalog and internet only). The four-tiered shelf is backless and has halogen lamps built into the shelves to illuminate the contents. The glass shelves are a great feature, but probably not ideal for a growing library.

If you plan on using a majority of your shelf space for books, Restoration Hardware has a beautiful set of shelves built to the same standards as the ones used in public libraries. The four solid oaks shelves have label slots and are partitioned to hold periodicals. The top of the case is slanted to display open books and new arrivals ($3680, only available online or catalog). If you'd like to leave some free space for accents, the Public Library Reading Lamp, originally created for the Rose Main Reading Room of the New York Public Library, would add a nice touch. The special white coating inside the brass shade is designed to reflect light onto books (http://www.hammacher.com/, $274.95).

For those of us with less space and even less to invest (think of a 24-year-old's first studio apartment in Manhattan), wall shelves are the way to go. Ikea's "Kirp" shelves are like steel check marks mounted on the wall to strictly hold books ($8.99 apiece). Two of these shelves staggered one over the other give any room a modern, efficient vibe.

Interior Design 101: Getting Started

A lot of characters have hit the scene in recent years who revel in the message that interior design can be done quickly, cheaply, and in an 'anything goes' kind of manner. Everyone from Martha Stewart (who really knows better) to Christopher Lowell, to the show which features neighbors who switch places and perform a quick re-do, have all taken their toll on the profession. The truth of the matter is this: it's not as easy as it looks on TV! If you're faced with a project that seems overwhelming – like a whole room, a renovation or even an entire home - take it step by step and take your time. Here are a few tips to get you started:

Begin with backgrounds. The walls, ceiling and floor are big planes of color, texture, or light that make up a room. Don't be afraid of color, but don't allow a room to drown in anything too vibrant. A lot of people go wrong by just accepting the so-called "builder's white" on walls and ceiling as if they are the finished backgrounds. They fill this void with furniture, then rugs, then draperies, then artworks, even plants and bric-a-brac. But nothing seems to complete the job or fulfill the senses. This is because it was not conceived of in its entirety from the very beginning. It's a matter of deciding on a course to follow and then taking it. And it makes the often perplexing task of decorating on an on-going basis simpler. You're not tempted by the whole world of home furnishing elements that bombard us from all angles. Suddenly, you're empowered by knowing what you want, what the room needs, and what will work.

Think about your style - as well as your treasured possessions. If you are one of the lucky people who have traveled widely and collected or inherited furniture and objects, think about what style of decorating would best showcase these possessions. Sometimes a merry mix can turn into a real mess. Consider rotating your various collections, rather than trying to fit them all into a room or rooms at once. A style that works for many people who have a mixture of furniture and collections is one I define as 'millennium.' It uses rich but tailored backgrounds such as textured wallcoverings, grasscloth, or prismatic paint jobs that serve as supportive backgrounds for the furniture, upholstery, collectibles, and, most importantly, the people who actually fill and use the finished space.

Take scale into account. Scale and lighting are key and your tactics will differ greatly depending on the size of your home: The era of the large house is here to stay, and great rooms, cathedral ceilings, and master bedroom suites that rival the Taj Mahal can pose big challenges. If you have such a home, here's your chance to use some of the large, deliciously comfortable upholstery shown everywhere now. And you can let it spread out to full advantage. Furniture of architectural scope is made for you as well. Conversely, if you own a tiny antique house, the market is full of marvelous antique reproduction upholstery of the 'doll's house' scale that suits your needs perfectly. Whichever category you fall into, it's a wise rule of thumb to allow the interiors to defer to the architecture of your home.

Consider hiring a professional. Do the tips above seem like a big challenge to you? Designers can help you point your tastes in the direction of unyielding 'good taste' that lasts over the years. If you decide to work with a designer, be open to new ideas. Preconceived notions of what 'goes' can scuttle a creative solution to your specific needs. Lastly, treat your interiors with the importance they deserve! In this insecure world in which we live, what's more important than coming home to a place you love to be in?

A Room For Your Full House

Poker is red-hot these days. There are currently four TV shows featuring Texas Hold'em tournaments on four different channels, loads of books (including the re-release of Super System by Doyle Brunson), online sites are full of action, and out here, home games are sprouting up everywhere. Until the Shinnecock casino gets built, these home games are all we have. Unfortunately, most of us don't have a great room to play in. Games end up with eight guys hunkered over a kitchen table that's either too small, too big, too round or too square, biting their nails or chewing gum because the wife doesn't want cigar smoke near the baby, and using feather-weight plastic chips from K-Mart. This is not how it's supposed to be. Picture green felt that makes it easy to deal and pick up your cards. Picture sunken drink holders instead of coasters. Imagine plumes of smoke, loud conversation, chips heavy enough to riffle, cases of cards at your disposal, and beers a few steps away. It's your poker room the way you've always dreamed.

First, you'll need a room. A buddy of mine has a spot above his woodshop. This is perfect for a couple of reasons. One, it's not connected to his house, which allows privacy for both him and his wife and keeps the smoke away from his kid. Two, the room has ambiance. A linoleum kitchen or a living room with floral fabrics is distracting and fails to set a mood. My buddy's room is decorated with mounted deer and ducks, and amuses us with its cage of live doves that laugh at the bad beats, and sing for the nut flush. But it started out as a room. Just as yours will. Maybe you have a spare bedroom that your son won't miss when he gets home from college.

Not everyone smokes, but a solid poker room needs to be smoke friendly unless you don't hang out with any nihilists, which is unlikely with gamblers. Depending on where your room is located, a ventilation system and/or an ionizer will probably be in order. Absolute Air Cleaners & Allergy Products carry a wide range of purification ionizers that will suit your room brilliantly by removing the unwanted linger of smoke and the stench and impurities that come with it. Model AAOIA is designed for Apartments, Mobile Homes, and Large Rooms. It retails for $384, will cover any room you might create, and comes in putty or black. Call 1-888-578-7324 or visit www.aircleaners.com for information. More important is installing an exhaust fan in your window.

The table will be the centerpiece of your room, and is available in hundreds of styles of varying price and quality. Avoid the folding boards designed for placing on top of a standard card table. For $150-$300, you can find a sufficient table that won't slide or break when someone slams a fist down after losing a full house to four of a kind. These less expensive models usually have folding legs and sunken drink and chip holders surrounding a felt playing surface – which is a necessity. Vintage and heavier wooden tables that convert to dining surfaces are also quite common.

When buying chips, make sure you get at least three colors, though most prefer four for those real-

UH! GEORGE,
I KNOW YOU WARNED ME...
...but the other guy said he'd give me their special promotional price and a free seafood dinner for two.
How could you go wrong?
And I would also save a few bucks. You know how it is.
How was I to know that the free dinner would be in that hole in the ground that was supposed to be my pool.
On its own salad.
I don't know what to do. The other guy is gone. His phone is disconnected.
Now my wife isn't talking to me.
My next door neighbor looks at me and says "Grribbit, grribbit. I'm going to call the town about your frog farm".
George, please help me out.
A little far fetched?
Maybe. Maybe not.
We've been designing, building and maintaining award winning pools and spas out here for over 30 years.
Quite a few pool and spa companies have come and gone in that time.
No free seafood dinners. Just fair prices and a sparkling clear pool.

Hobby Horse - $875

You can really enjoy this fine African Tribal Artifact from the Bambara Tribe located in Mali. The Hobby Horse was used during pantomimes to poke fun at the village authorities. The artifact is superbly hand carved from wood with intricate metal overlays, measures forty-five inches high, artist is unknown as a tribal artisan made it. It was created using traditional materials, methods and context. So mount up and enjoy this symbol of tribal African luxury.

Available at Native Accents Galleries, 2415 Main Street, Konner Court - Lower Level, Bridgehampton. 631- 537-8380.

Antique Garden Statue $8,500

Wouldn't you like to join Apollo in your garden every morning? He is a lovely addition and the ultimate in garden furnishings. This treasure is a beautifully crafted stone garden statue of a man Georgica Creek Antiques has lovingly named "Apollo". Seen standing with his dog, while holding a bow and arrow, the 19th century Italian figure stands five feet tall. The garden statue is composed of stone and cement, with excellent detail on his face and body, and can be left outdoors, year 'round.

Available at Georgica Creek Antiques, 332 Montauk Highway, PO Box 877, Wainscott. 631-537-0333.

Yoga Sanctuary

Everyone needs a place to seek sanctuary and peace in this demanding culture in which we live. We island people are lucky enough to have one of the most grounding, inspiring, and peaceful places at our fingertips. The endless ocean stretching to meet the boundless sky in a kiss of blues always reminds me of the tiny but significant butterfly-flapping role I play in nature's plan. The constant crashing of the foamy waves on the golden grainy shore reminds me of the things in life we can rely on. So we have the ocean.

But what about those moments when the house gets chaotic, when you've finished cleaning the kitchen but you can't relax in the living room with cartoons blaring from the television? Times like those, wouldn't it be nice to have a sanctuary in your own home? Someday, I will have a room in my house devoted to yoga, to peace, to stillness. And this is how I dream it will be.

Because an important aspect of yoga is awareness and presence in the moment, I find that all five of my senses are peaked during a practice. Therefore, in my dream yoga space, all five of my senses will be pleased. In Thailand and other Buddhist countries, you can't walk down the street without wafts of soothing incense tickling your nose. Because scents are proven to be the most potent memory triggers, these incense sticks are filled with positive energy for me. However, I am a bit hesitant to burn too much incense because I want the air to be fresh when I take my deep inhalations. Therefore, I would probably burn a fragrant oil that would give the air the hint of these scents without the smoke.

The lighting that will fill my vision has to be natural and soft. This can be achieved in several ways. Lots of windows allow the sun's energy to penetrate the studio, and will add a nice natural warmth. But on very bright days, I don't want so much light that I have to squint. I should be able to relax all of the muscles in my face when facing the windows. Therefore, I would get some flowing curtains. There is something soothing about watching the breeze fill up colorful curtains, making them billow like sails. The curtains will tone down the brightness, while adding a nice glow to the room. If the curtains are blue, they will have more of a cooling effect. If they are orange, their vibrancy will have more of an energizing effect.

Aside from the lighting, I want lots of windows for the air circulation. Since many kinds of yoga focus on the breath, I've found that having a steady breeze is helpful to my concentration and to my ability to release other thoughts. At the end of a yoga practice, while lying in "corpse pose", I can usually slow down the activity of my thoughts. But one thing that helps me let go of certain nagging thoughts is the ability to focus on a natural sound. A gentle breeze is perfect in this capacity.

The sounds that fill your ears during yoga have to achieve the delicate balance that yoga is meant to achieve: the level seesaw of energy and peace. For me, there is nothing like the sound of water to achieve this balance. I feel energized from the ocean's strength and endurance, but its repetitiveness gives me peace and sanctuary. If I am not one of the few lucky ones who can hear the ocean's waves from a room in my house, though, there are plenty of CDs that add a similar kind of serenity to a yoga practice. I like listening to Indian music during yoga. It is obvious from the music's simultaneous intensity and subtlety that yoga originated there.

Home Sweet Rental

Long before I owned my house in Sag Harbor I rented in the Hamptons, first in the summer, then for a while all year round. Each year I learned a little more about what was important to me in a rental. Location, proximity to the beach, the size of the house, and number of bathrooms all became decisive factors.

But no matter how beautiful the house or how many amenities were included, it never felt quite like home until I began sprinkling it with personal touches that appealed to all my senses. A few framed 5x7 photos on the coffee table made it feel like I was always in the company of friends and family. Keeping a selection of my favorite CDs on hand filled the house with sounds that matched my mood. My favorite books scattered about the house – the ones I liked to read again and again, like a collection of The Best American Essays or Short Stories – felt like a conversation that I was waiting to resume. I even brought one of my favorite coffee mugs from home. Its familiar size and shape felt comfortable in my hand and somehow seemed to make my morning coffee taste better. And my favorite neck-roll pillow was great tossed on my bed, and waiting for me when I wanted a nap.

Moving-in day became a ritual that was fun. I covered the bottom of the drawers in the bedroom with pretty, new floral shelf paper, and put in little pouches of my favorite sachets in scents of lilac and rose. I'd change overly bright light bulbs with something dimmer and more soothing. Ceremoniously I'd display my perfume bottles, and take a pretty mug or glass from the kitchen and stand my makeup brushes and lip-liners inside the cup like a personal floral arrangement displayed on a bathroom shelf.

I discovered that Flashbacks in Sag Harbor had great straw mats and runners that could be used on the floors or on tables, and rolled up, taken home and used again the following year.

Then one year, I rented late in the season, and while the house was clean and convenient, it felt like I was in someone else's skin. The house was decorated nicely in monochromatic shades of white and cream but the environment seemed sterile. So I called Carole Meltzer, a Feng Shui master, (CaroleMeltzer.com) who splits her time working and living between Westhampton and Palm Springs. She told me to go out and get a "smudge" of sage, light it and walk counter clockwise around the interior space of the house. She said this was like "giving the house a spiritual bath."

I took her advice, and bought candles in my favorite scents like lavender and spice. Carole warned me that too many candles created a lot of heat and might make the atmosphere ripe for arguments. "Best to cluster them," she said. One suggestion she had was like a combination of a decorating tip and a recipe. "Take a tray," she said, "and sprinkle it with rice for texture, then arrange it with lots of votive candles." The tray looked inventive, added atmosphere and filled the space with aromas like vanilla and citrus.

Carole told me to add splashes of color with inexpensive throws and pillows. "Yellows, blues and khakis were good for energy and cheer in the living room," she said. But, warned me that too much blue "could make you feel blue". She said that pinks, yellows and greens were great for love, energy, and fertility in the bedroom. So I dashed off to Pier One on Montauk Highway and came back with an arsenal of color.

Now, of course, my own home is completely personalized, but whenever I need a lift I walk counter clockwise with my sage and get a few colorful, new pillows or throws, sometimes adding a bit of pink or subtracting some blue.

Kid Chic

So you've mastered the art of decorating. Your bedroom is fit for a king or a queen, your living room boasts meticulously placed art that complements the sofa, which complements the ottoman, and your kitchen has shiny pots and pans dangling futuristically from the ceiling. Every room in which your authority reigns supreme is as it should be. But then, that door on the landing looms before you. How do you decorate a space that is technically your responsibility, but that is the forum of a very important little person's life? Your child opens his/her eyes in the morning to these four walls, falls asleep at night with the vigil of this night light, sits cross-legged on this carpet to color with crayons. So, what color walls? What character on the night light? Where exactly does the line between fashionable and too fashionable lie?

One great look that is emerging in interior decorating for babies' rooms is the vibrant "Italian Villa" ambience. The walls are warm yellows or oranges and the furniture is wrought iron. It seems a little excessive to call your baby's room the "Italian Villa", but it would be nice to sit in an antique rocking chair to lull the baby to sleep confined within this warmth. Is it too much chic and not enough kid to lay your baby down in a wrought iron basket? Or will a bright Italian fresco stimulate colorful dreams in your baby's sleeping head? That's your line to draw.

Another trend in kids' chic style is a bright color scheme. Think hot pink, bright green, and white. I know when I was an eight-year old girl, this would have been my ideal. Since the nightmare of hot pink spandex has successfully been left in the 80s where it belongs, hot pink can resurface with a name of its own. These colors can either brighten up the room as solid surfaces of color, or they can be combined into stripes, polka dots, or floral patterns for a lively, upbeat feel.

"I myself, know a flower that is unique in all the world..."–The Little Prince

One of the most famous applications of these brilliant colors is Marimekko, and it is making its glorious resurgence back onto the chic scene. These bright, bold patterns first emerged in the sixties and seventies, and they are a great look for kids as well as adults. One creative Marimekko product is the wall adhesive, which you can peel off and replace all over the house, building beautiful gardens of vibrant pink and red flowers.

Choosing a theme for a room is a great way to inspire your kids' creativity and imaginations. As soon as they're old enough to speak, your kids will have plenty of ideas for their surroundings. How creative they become is really up to you. Of course there are limits to how much you can allow their imaginations to dictate the room. Real lions are probably out of the question. But if you ask them what they want, and they shout that they want an African safari, don't dismiss it out of hand. Why shouldn't your child wake up from beneath zebra-striped sheets to deep green walls? Why couldn't the two of you go crazy together making a mural of exotic birds hiding in the vegetation? You don't want to choose something that your child is going to tire of in two weeks, but something unique could really inspire individualism.

To help your child along in choosing a theme, you can think of activities that you enjoy together, like scuba diving, sports or rodeos. You could also use characters from children's books that you enjoy, like the Cat in the Hat or The Little Prince. Wouldn't it be magical to open your eyes every morning to the most beloved character from your favorite book? Along the same lines, you could use characters from comic books like Spiderman or from TV shows like Sesame Street.

Your child's room could potentially be the most exciting room to decorate. You have the opportunity

Flea Market Finds

I confess. I have a fantasy and it goes like this... Lights. Camera pulls in for a tight shot on "an-old-world-item-oozing-charm-and-distinction," a newly discovered flea market find with a certain je ne sais quoi ... then pulls back to capture my reaction. I'm the unsuspecting yet hopeful collector sitting opposite one of the appraisers from The Antique Roadshow. After carefully appraising the item, the expert confesses – my one-of-a-kind discovery is worth a small fortune.

Okay, it's a fantasy, but as interior designers and antique enthusiasts know, cruising flea markets and antique shows can be both fun (as in the thrill of the kill) and, on occasion, lucrative. Moreover, it's a treasure hunt for wonderful, unique items. And when you add the satisfaction of finding new and unexpected uses for old objects, you have an approach to decorating and collecting that's truly personal and really creative. And sometimes pays dividends.

Another bonus of "flea-chic" decorating is that it's individual; it doesn't dictate a single look. It's a thrifty way to furnish a home or apartment and a stylish means of expressing your interests and tastes. Adorning your living space with second-hand treasures adds character and personality to every room in the house.

Flea markets are great alternatives to retail stores for finding unique accessories. They differ from traditional retail stores in that you get to be a super-sleuth. It's your job to plot a course successfully through the maze of stalls with a sharp eye and a keen shopping instinct. If you're new to flea market shopping, here are some things to consider:

Don't let a lack of antique knowledge stop you from experiencing this fun pasttime. The more you do of it, the more you will know. Don't be afraid to ask questions of the owner or dealer if they know about the item, its age, origin, and condition. That's how you can learn other tricks.

Don't be fooled by booth appearances. Remember the adage: "Don't judge a book by its cover" – a few things on a blanket will cost less than a fully arranged booth. A general rule, the more a vendor merchandises, the more you'll end up paying, so shop carefully. Many elaborate booths are simply extensions of retail outlets.

Dress down. If you look too snazzy, chances are you'll pay more. Think shabby chic - a sweatshirt and comfortable shoes are appropriate attire. If it's an outdoor affair, consider a hat and sunscreen. Also, bring water just in case you get thirsty canvassing the aisles.

Get there early. You know you've arrived too late if all you see is people walking out with lamps and picture frames. These, according to flea market specialists, are the two most popular items. When they're gone, you know the place has been picked over.

Take cash. Lots of single bills and nothing higher than a $20 bill will give you negotiating power.

Deal! Do you have to pay the listed price? You'll never know if you don't ask.

Make a list. Write down the accessories you're in the market for. This prevents impulse buying and makes sure you don't end up with something you didn't want or didn't need.

Bring plastic bags. Your old grocery bags will come in handy if a vendor should run out. If unused, the bags simply fold into nothing.

Drive an appropriate vehicle. Flea market shopping is usually cash-and-carry, and most vendors don't deliver. You might want to borrow a friend's truck or van if you don't have one and know you'll be looking for a large-sized item.

If you're bitten by the antiquing bug: Remember that research is the key to successful shopping. Pick a direction or style and learn as much as you can about it, whether by reading books, visiting museums and antique shops, or going online.

Forget my fantasy, the "flea-chic" shopping experience is about unearthing hidden treasures. The most precious items are not those you think will be valuable for resale. The really priceless things are the objects you love.

ly big games. The real casino chips were recently taken off the market through pressure from the major casinos, but clay composite chips are readily available and have a nice heft. They don't exactly "click" like the casino chips (with metal inserts for added weight), but they far outshine anything you'll buy around here. www.gamblersgifts.com has cases of 24 packs of cards for $19.95. Buy at least one. Running short of cards when the jerk that can't shuffle bends one is unacceptable. It's his fault, but you're hosting. Make him toss an extra chip in the pot.

Since you don't want to interrupt play, set up a mini-fridge for drinks. Smokers should buy a reasonably priced humidor for the room. The Cigar Store in East Hampton has a selection of Don Salvatore humidors that run between $40 and $200 based on cigar count. Don't waste your good smokes on your friends unless they're real smokers, but instead fill your box with moderately priced hand rolled cigars that won't break your bank to hand out. Put in a few of your favorites for you and the occasional aficionados you play with.

Lastly, decorate. Bookshelves are a nice touch and can be filled with poker books to intimidate your visitors as well as enhance your enjoyment and understanding of the game. I recommend Positively Fifth Street by James McManus, The Biggest Game in Town by A. Alvarez, Poker Nation by Andy Bellin, and for strategy, no gambler should be without Super System. How to Play Poker Like the Pros by Phil Helmuth, and any book by Sklansky or T.J. Cloutier will also make a fine addition. Look for them at Paradise Books in Sag Harbor. The rest is up to your personal taste, but you'd be surprised how a few dead animals can bring a room to life.

No matter your preference or budget, your bookshelves can be used for more than displaying your personal library. Different accents can be added to make the space your own. Sitting plants or vases with flowers or sticks of bamboo on a top shelf can add color. Framed photographs and accent lamps are a nice touch. A popular accessory is to line shelves with rattan baskets. The baskets not only create storage for magazines or toys, but also give the illusion of drawers. A different spin is to use vintage-style fabric covered boxes, like ones found at Pottery Barn. The boxes come in sets of three in different sizes, and are ideal for holding photographs, cards, or magazines ($129). Pottery Barn has also published the fourth installment in its Design Library series focusing on storage and display, which offers unique ideas for bookshelves ($24.95).

With a little creativity and a good eye, bookshelves can be versatile pieces to have in the home, even if the floor-to-ceiling, wall-to-wall library is not in your future.

I Brake for Yard Sales

When it comes to yard sales, I figure the population can be split into two distinct groups – those that love them (and should consider bumper stickers that say "I brake for yard sales") and those poor souls who get dragged along. Getting dragged along isn't as bad as it sounds, provided you keep an open mind. This I can attest to, having come across a few fabulous finds which, left on my own, might never have been discovered. I would have driven right by, blissfully unaware of the possible gems awaiting discovery.

Which brings up a great point and a cardinal "yard sale" rule...curb appeal. Don't discount the power of visual suggestion, especially if you want to ensure the best possible turn out for your yard sale. And the better it looks, the more people will come. Besides, we're curious beings. It's what keeps us moving forward and exploring. When attending yard sales, remember the saying: "One man's junk is another man's treasure."

Here are a few tips to keep in mind for successful rummaging on both ends of the spectrum and even in between.

For the seller:

• Check with local officials to see if you need a permit to hold a yard sale. Print up signs. Also, check with the local news outlets to place an ad the week before you hold your garage sale. Advertising is a great way to boost traffic and sales.

• Give your neighbors a head's up, and remember to take your signs down after the sale is over.

• If possible, try to set up the night before, or very early the day of the sale. If you don't want people to preview, make certain to note that in your signs and/or ad.

• Have a rain date selected just in case and make certain your signs and/or ads state this date.

• Be prepared to haggle. People come to yard sales expecting to bargain.

• Set out larger items – furniture, lawn mowers, exercise equipment, musical instruments – near the curb to tempt those driving by to explore.

• Make certain all your treasures are clean and dust-free, making them more appealing to discriminating buyers. The better the appearance, layout, and organization, the more people will be inclined to spend their money at your yard sale.

• Display things in categories. Keep clothing, linens, toys and other items separated. Don't just pile clothes on a table, try to display on a rack or keep clothes folded.

• Have prices on all items clearly marked.

• Make certain you have enough change the day of the sale.

• Keep breakables and glass items away from the edges of tables and as far out of reach of children as possible.

• Once your sale is over, pack and label leftovers for your next garage sale or donate these items to a favorite charity. Many provide receipts that can be used as a tax deduction.

For the buyer:

• As the saying goes: "The early bird catches the worm" – get out early (but not before it's set to start) if you want first pickings.

• When making a purchase, carefully look over an item before you buy it because most items are sold "as is." Once you get home and find out your purchase doesn't work or is missing a piece, chances are you're out of luck. If it's an electrical appliance, ask to plug it in to test it before purchasing.

• Don't be shy about asking the seller for a lower price. Everyone tries to bargain at yard sales.

• Don't be afraid of NOT buying something at a yard sale. Otherwise you'll end up with so much stuff you'll have to have your own yard sale.

• Lastly, if you see an item you like and the seller won't negotiate a lower price, ask to leave your name and telephone number, explaining that if it doesn't sell by the end of the day you're still interested.

For the in-between:

• Think of it like an adventure, a treasure hunt even – because you never know what you may discover!

–Aurrice Duke

Taste, while in some respects less of a factor in yoga, is still important. I wouldn't eat right before a yoga practice, and the only tastes I am looking for are the freshness of water and those scents that are so vivid you can almost taste them on your tongue.

Finally, touch. While I think it is important to have hardwood floors to support our bodies during some poses, there are poses in which comfort is integral. For these positions that usually require stillness, I want soft pillows and comfy blankets easily accessible.

This yoga room is not just for yoga. It is for stillness and peace. These pillows and blankets could end up cradling me as I paint or read or write or whisper. This room would glow with warmth and welcome, and would certainly be host to the birth of a spectrum of thoughts and feelings inspired by a room of peace.

The Clubhouse at Indian Island Golf Course

Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead
631-727-0788

When Russ Moran Jr. took over the catering facilities at the Suffolk County-owned Indian Island golf course almost two years ago, he knew that he was coming into a situation where there had been little positive effort for some time. Russ is of the breed of restaurateurs who come from unlikely backgrounds. He worked in the family legal publishing business until one day when, realizing that that was not what he wanted to do with the rest of his life, he decided to make a change. Russ had been to culinary school and loved to cook, and so he came to be the host at Indian Island.

I hadn't been in the restaurant for some years, even though I play most of my golf there. What an amazing transformation. The bar and dining areas are warm and comfortable with soft lighting on each smartly laid table. As with all businesses, Russ has had to experiment to find the correct balance for his restaurant, and now he offers an eclectic menu of seafood, salads, soups, entrees and sandwiches throughout the day and evening. During the day golfers, business groups and casual lunch visitors are his clients. At night the restaurant transforms into a comfortable place to drop in for a meal, to hold a meeting, or to have a party, as the layout allows for considerable flexibility.

We started with what Russ told us has become their signature dish, and the gently pan-fried oysters were delicious. Some clams on the half shell from the raw bar were also everything that you would expect from shellfish in this part of the world. The soup of the day was a fresh tomato that had appropriate acidity and good texture, and the classic French onion soup was deep in taste with lots of lovely stringy cheese.

From the salads we shared a Caesar salad that had good ingredients, but the dressing was slightly acidic and could have been creamier.

When it came to the entrees we had to sample the calves liver with bacon and onions because it is a favorite and one not too often found on menus. We also tried one of the day's specials, Long Island duck, with a pepper cherry sauce. One thing is certain: it is very doubtful if anyone ever leaves here hungry as the portions will test the heartiest appetites. The liver was nicely done, as was the duck. The only criticism was that the accompanying vegetables should have been a little more cooked.

Desserts are brought in and change from day to day. We indulged our taste for chocolate with the quaintly named "Chocolate Outreach Cake." Any chocolate lover will really appreciate this dessert.

As we finished with a good cup of espresso, we agreed that Russ has created an atmosphere and menu that should have very wide appeal. The prices are extremely reasonable with appetizers from $5.95 to $9.95 and main courses, which also include soup or salad and vegetables, from $11.95 to $16.95. A wide range of sandwiches and burgers are available from $5.95 to $10.95.

Russ has a short, sensible wine list focusing on Long Island wines, which at $5 to $6 for a generous glass or $20 to $25 a bottle, keeps the price of an evening out at an attractive level.

The Clubhouse is open from 11 a.m. until sunset, 7 days a week, and specializes in parties and weddings where, with the addition of an attractive tent, they can handle up to 180 guests.

One of the beauties about this part of the world is the wealth of restaurants we have available to us. Here at the Clubhouse at Indian Island, Russ Moran has created a restaurant which will attract more and more diners seeking well cooked, realistically priced food, especially now that there is a smart new illuminated sign at the entrance on Route 105 to advise passers-by that good food and a warm welcome are just down the driveway.

Quick Bites

After enjoying an Easter brunch with friends, we found ourselves ravenous around 8:30 in the evening last Sunday. Of course, every restaurant everywhere was closed on that unseasonably cold and rainy night. Making one last ditch effort, we stuck our heads in Joe Anthony's front door, only to be told that they, too, had just closed. But then owner Kevin Cohen generously offered to make us something to go, and, well, one thing led to another... Long story short, as we enjoyed a couple of excellent burgers washed down with Sam Adams at the bar, Kevin, after having spontaneously become our private chef, regaled us with stories of a youth spent exploring the Riverhead cranberry bog and his present hobby of raising exotic pheasants. It was a wonderful evening.

Thank you, Kevin, for your gracious hospitality. See you again real soon. –S.W.Simm

North Fork Critics' Choice Awards 2003

The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Dining Destinations

And The Winner Is...

I think it is safe to say that Dan's Papers annual Best of the Best contest has indeed achieved institution status on the East End, and while we all know it's not who wins or loses, it's still a lot more fun to win. And speaking of winners, 2003's lucky award recipients are spotlighted below. Just look for the designation at the end of each restaurant description, and follow the key to find out who won what. The list is impressive, but then so are today's dining options here on the North Fork.

–Susan W. Simm, Dan's North Fork Editor

2003 North Fork Best of the Best Winners

A-Ambiance, B-Bistro, Br- Brunch, C-Chef, Ch-Chicken Dish, Cu-Cuisine, D-Décor, Di-Dinner Specials, I-Italian Cuisine, L-Lobster Dish, Lu-Lunch Menu, Me-Mediterranean Cuisine, O-Outdoor Dining, N-New Chef, P-Pasta, Pu-Pub, S-Salad, Ser-Service, Sh-Shellfish Dish, Sou-Soup, Spe-Special Occasion Dining, St-Steak, V-Vegetarian Dish, W-Wine List, Wi-Wines by the glass.

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03). {Di,S,Sh}

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [Br,D]

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03). {Pu}.

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

La Plage. A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef / proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brulee.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook,2/04). [Ap,Ch]

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef /owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03). [D]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). {A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W}

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).{Lu,N}

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.) {Me,V}

Greenport's lovely Shady Lady Inn

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O]

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppresata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). [C,I,P]

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03). [St].

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

'Tis The Season Of The Tan

There was a time when my favorite recreational activity was reclining on a lounge chair, slathered in baby oil, listening to music as I caught rays in pursuit of the perfect golden brown tan. The aerobic portion of this act was when I flipped over, or stood up to turn the chair as I followed the sun across the sky. That was then...

Now, I have a Draconian fear of exposing naked skin to sunlight. I won't leave the house without prepping my face with SPF 15 moisturizer. I cover up (even when it is overcast) and hide behind sunglasses. At the beach, I crouch under the umbrella after having applied layer upon layer of sun block.

Yes, in my frivolous youth I fried my skin, but now I am attempting to preserve any lingering elasticity with the hope of also warding off more perilous afflictions, such as melanoma. Yet, I confess I am addicted to a bronzed dermis. How can something that looks so healthy be so bad? To my mind, nothing beats a tan, particularly on my pabulum colored limbs.

Thus, I have perfected the art of the self-tanning. This is not for the faint of discipline. It takes work. In fact, the knowledge I am about to impart has been acquired through years of trial and error.

My worst experience was with an early formulation of product produced by Coppertone that vowed glowing skin in just a few hours. One bright sunny day, I decided to give it a whirl and used it like suntan lotion, generously rubbing it all over before lying out on the family boat.

I fell asleep, dreaming of how beautiful I would be and awoke with a shock, to find that my skin was indeed glowing...orange. Most embarrassing, I had left an equally glowing orange imprint of my backside on the white foredeck and was forced to spend the next few hours bleaching it clean. The deck, that is...it took a week or more for the dye, I mean "tan" to "fade."

Now, there are better products. One of the best is made by Clarins. However, it is tad expensive and takes an hour or so to soak in (before you can go to sleep or put on clothes), so I decided to try some more conveniently priced, drug store brands that promised "natural looking color in minutes." I opted for the New Endless Summer Sunless Tanning Foam from Coppertone in medium/dark, whose label boasted that it would dry in only five minutes and deliver color in only a half an hour. (Clearly the optimum choice for tanning on deck.) I also bought L'Oreal New Sublime Bronze Self-Tanning Gelee and Lotion, which both swore to be streak free (streaks are another horrifying hazard of self-tanners) in the light-medium shade, because I was a bit wary of the orange packaging (fearing the tan it delivered might be of a similar tint).

I then prepped my skin by stepping into a steamy shower and loofahing from head to toe. Once the skin was properly exfoliated, I shaved my legs and quickly toweled off. Keeping an old, clean towel handy, as well as a smaller exfoliating pad, I proceeded to apply the foam to one arm. It was very light and went on easily. I was careful not to rub it on to my elbow (instead, I just dabbed lightly as the elbows, knees, and back of ankles and fingers are areas that tend to seize color more than others). I wiped my hands on the towel before each application. The foam did dry quickly, which made me happy. Then, I moved on to the L'Oreal Quick Dry Sublime Bronze Gelee. It went on easily over my other arm, though it didn't evaporate on my skin like the foam did. I then applied the lotion to my legs, which felt very similar to Clarins', but it took a long time to dry. So I filed my nails as I waited for it to soak in.

To remove excess color from my palms and the inside of my wrists, I used the exfoliating pad. Thirty minutes later I couldn't detect very much... perhaps a faint beige tint on the L'Oreal Gelee arm. Four hours later, both of the L'Oreal products had delivered a very light color (next time I would try the dark tone) while the Coppertone foam was so pale as to be almost non-existent (even though I had used the medium-dark version). However, all looked pretty natural.

Here's the real secret to self-tanning success: make time to do it right. There are salon processes, such as spray-on applications, or lotions applied via massage, but these, too, take time and money. Mystic Tan is a salon procedure that looks like the real McCoy, but can produce the dubious orange hue with too frequent visits. I have also heard (from a friend who works at very exclusive spa) about a regime called "Flawless Tan" that promises to an overall even application. The esthetician uses a white light to detect where the product has been applied. However, the spa is shying away from investing in this latest technology because too many clients have previously freaked about streaks with past endeavors.

In the end, any of these processes, administered with patience and care, can provide some temporary glam color. All are safe and healthy alternatives to sun tanning. It is one of the few times in our lives where fake bests real. So go for it...get bronzed.

Surfside Marina Joins Fight Against ALS

The quote echoes in all of our heads, one of the greatest speeches of all time: "Today I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth," Lou Gehrig announced to a stadium full of people at his farewell address in 1939. Since then ALS, more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease, has gained publicity as one of the truly devastating diseases that has yet to find a cure. ALS, or Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, is a fatal disease that causes muscular deterioration resulting in paralysis and ultimately death. The causes of ALS are still unknown, but in a recent medical breakthrough, researchers discovered Rilutek, a drug that helps to slow the symptoms. When ALS took hold of Lou Gehrig, he was still a young man. He had set a record for consecutive games played at 2130, a number which would not be surpassed until Cal Ripken did it in 1995. Gehrig was one of the best baseball players the country has ever seen. Leading the league in homeruns three times and in RBIs five times, he hit .340 over the span of seventeen years and helped lead the Yankees to six World Series victories. His athleticism and endurance in baseball made it even more shocking for the world to absorb when he announced in 1939 that he was dying of ALS.

David Cone

On April 8, 2004, Bruce Edwards, well-known caddy and loyal friend of professional golfer Tom Watson, fell victim to ALS. He had been battling the disease for a year, but the absence of a cure defeated him also. He was only 49 years old, and will not be forgotten by his boss, who says he's "relying on his spirit to take care of me."

In an effort to raise money for further research on this disease, former Yankee and Met pitcher David Cone began the David Cone Foundation. This organization, along with "Ride for Life" and Surfside Three Marina, will be throwing a fundraising event on April 22 at the Blue Honu restaurant in Huntington. The fundraiser will have a "Caribbean Craze" theme, and partying for the benefit of a noble cause always makes for a good time. There will be island drinks, Caribbean food, dancing, and limbo. The steel-drum reggae band will certainly add to the ambience. There will also be raffles and auctions to benefit ALS research.

The other organization involved in the coordinating of this event is Ride for Life, Inc., founded in 1998 by ALS patients, caregivers, and others. Annually, members of this group ride their electric wheelchairs on highways around the country to raise both funds and awareness. This year will be a ride from Manhattan to Montauk Point lasting from May 8th to May 16th. There will be a stop during that journey at Surfside Three Marina's headquarters, where the funds raised at Caribbean Craze will be presented to the riders. It shows how passionately devoted people are to this cause, and I'm sure that every car that passes this group on their eight-day journey will be curious. Hopefully it will encourage the public to better understand the importance of researching this disease.

David Cone, New York Jets quarterback Chad Pennington, and former New York Giants coach Jim Fassel all plan to attend the Caribbean Craze benefit, which should be a wonderful event. Last year, Surfside Three hosted another event called Martini Madness, at which they raised nearly $20,000 for the "Save the Sound" organization, created to clean up Long Island's beaches and waterways. This year's event on April 22 is limited to 350 guests, and those who would like to attend are encouraged to make early reservations. For more information, call (631) 277-8986.

Police Blotter

Several thieves in East Hampton are most likely liquored up this week. A Navy Road resident called police on Friday to report the theft of almost $200 in assorted liquors from her apartment. According to police the thirsty perps took one bottle of rum worth $25, two bottles of brandy valued at $50 a piece and one bottle of cognac worth $50. Police said there was no sign of forced entry.

Police responded to the scene of a tag sale gone bad in East Hampton on Thursday. According to the Saddle Lane resident, he was hosting the sale where approximately seventy people had visited his home during a three-hour period. He told police he had a designer bag containing some clothes stashed away in an upstairs closet, but when the tag sale was over his bag was gone. The bag, worth about $400, contained $150 worth of clothing and was last seen in the master bedroom closet. The bag's owner noted that a backyard gate was open and that no one could have opened it from the outside. Police are investigating.

Another apartment dweller in East Hampton called police last week after her wallet went missing from her Accabonac Road residence. Police responded to take the report and investigate. The woman told officers that her maid had been there all day and took the trash out which she apparently never does. The woman checked the trash bin and found her wallet without the $700 cash that it had previously held. She also told police that a pair of gold earrings were missing from her bedroom. With a full report of the incident, police went back to headquarters where they were able to contact the maid. She agreed to come down to the office where she gave her side of the story and was arrested for petit larceny.

And now for some more crime-abroad...

In Arizona, police arrested a woman after she was turned in by a company offering an interesting service. Guns For Hire is an Arizona-based group who provide gun fight scenes for Wester movies. The middle-aged woman had called the business thinking they were hit men and requested her husband be killed. After brief court visits, the woman was sentenced to four and a half years.

In Chicago, police are apparently getting overwhelmed with the number of outstanding arrest warrants. They devised a brilliant plan to lure these criminals right into their arms. Each criminal-at-large received free Cub's tickets in the mail. Every single one of them showed up for the big game and their warrants were served.

BOWL-A-RAMA
Dear Dan,

Do you have three hours on a Wednesday morning for some fun and recreation plus a little exercise? The MENS Senior Bowling League is looking for new bowlers.

Don't worry about your level of expertise in bowling because it is a handicap league. We have a range of averages from 80 to 180. Some of our bowlers are older than their average. Even if you never bowled before come on down and have a good time with a bunch of swell fellers.

Come to the East Hampton Bowling Center on Wednesday morning at 8:45 and start having a good time.

It cost only $11 a week that's a lot cheaper than a therapy session, and a lot more fun. The way our league is set up is, if you can't bowl one week for some reason or other you don't have to pay for that week. We just ask that if you start to bowl you try to make as many Wednesday's as possible.

So how about it? We will be looking for you on Wednesday morning.

SCHOOL PROJECT
Dear Dan,

My name is Dorothy. I am in Mrs. Hall's fifth grade class. We are doing a state research project, and I will be doing my project on New York. The project is due in the middle of May, and it will cover such topics as famous people from Bridgehampton and New York, your special state traditions and the history of Bridgehampton and New York.

The reason that I am writing to your local paper is to ask if you could publish my letter in your paper. I am hoping that some of the members of your community would write to me and tell me about their experiences and traditions in Bridgehampton.

I would even enjoy if they would share their favorite recipes with me. I live in Southern California and I am sure many things about Bridgehampton are very different from where I live. Also, If any of your citizens find time to reply, it would be great if they could enclose of copy of my "published" letter.

Thank you so much for taking time to read my letter. Any information would be most appreciated.

HELP FOR THE HOMELESS
Dear Dan,

We were interested in your March 5 tale of A Personal Encounter: Down, Out and Begging in One of the Wealthiest Enclaves in America. Your story exemplified the dichotomy we see every day. We thought you would be interested to know that two years ago we initiated a program to help the homeless, "Maureen's Haven" named after Sr. Maureen Michael, a Dominican Sister who spent her life helping the poor and homeless from Catholic Charities in Bridgehampton.

Like you, when seeing a homeless person on the streets we would feel compassion but would ask ourselves what could we do? So we created a structure so that people of good will could respond positively. For the past two years during the six coldest months of the year, November 1 – March 31, local houses of worship of many denominations are staffed by volunteers who prepare hot meals, eat with the guests, and offer them a safe and warm place to sleep overnight. Transportation to the host site and back to the place where they were picked up is contracted with United Vets, a transportation company manned by formerly homeless veterans.

At present, we pick up an average of seventeen people per night in Riverhead and Hampton Bays and take them to churches on the North Fork, in Westhampton Beach and Hampton Bays. We would love to replicate the program farther east, serving the South Fork, but must address the increased funding which would be needed to cover the costs for additional staffing and transportation.

Thank you for bringing this situation to the attention of the community so movingly. I am enclosing copies of our brochures for your information. I would like to bring my Associate Director Mardythe DiPirro and meet with you in the near future to see what ideas you might have on how we can grow Maureen's Haven to meet the need to provide for the homeless on the East End.

If you like pina coladas...

Here's your means of escape.

"Between the kids, the bills, and, well, hey, just life, sometimes you've gotta get away. Chill. Decompress.

Surfside 3 Marina showed Barbara and me a great way to do that. We got a good price on a beautiful Sea Ray Sundancer, and it's been worth every penny. For people who are always giving others great getaway deals, it's about time we got one ourselves."

Clifford & Barbara Rawlings -Travel Agency owners
Surfside 3 customers since 1999.
